NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FROM WASHINGTON.

[illegible] of Congress—Commencement [illegible] Struggle for the Speakership—[illegible] Long Delay of the Organization [illegible] Two-thirds Rule.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 5.

The Symptoms to-day sprung in modes yet [illegible] inaugurated what is destined to be the [illegible] Session of Congress the country has [illegible] for many years.

In the Senate, Mr. MASON of Virginia, submitted a [illegible] directing an inquiry into the facts surrounding the Harper's Ferry insurrection. This resolution was prepared after much consideration and [illegible] among the Southern Senators, and looks [illegible] investigation of the causes leading to [illegible] and the source from which the sinews of [illegible] have been drawn. The object is unmistakably political [illegible] having in implicating certain distinguished members of the Republican Party, and thereby [illegible] for their party.

[illegible] Sherman card was played [illegible] resolution, defining what no member [illegible] recommended HELPER'S Impending Crisis [illegible] it to be Speaker, was aimed at SHERMAN, [illegible] candidate, where name appears as [illegible] indorsers of the book. This fact was [illegible] to injure and defeat SHERMAN if possible, [illegible] he can believed he approves a sentiment [illegible] in the publication. Members of Congress [illegible] have been too much given to signing every paper [illegible] for their signatures.

Mr. SHERMAN does not hesitate to say that he signed the paper, that is, the circular recommending the [illegible] and circulation Helper's Book—but he [illegible] repudiates any sympathy with the views of the [illegible]. This fact he will state on the floor of the House, if occasion demands. Yet the document is [illegible] in the public capital, and will be made to [illegible] purposes to the fullest extent.

[illegible] Democrats allowed another ballot to-day, [illegible] would have been elected Speaker. He [illegible] lacked but four votes, and these were [illegible] cast for him, if necessary to elect. The [illegible] to-morrow will vary the result, [illegible] his election by a majority. No election [illegible] be had except under the plurality rule, [illegible] Anti-Lecompton men will support within a [illegible] and perhaps to-morrow—thus giving or [illegible] to the Republicans, as stated last night. [illegible] plurality rule will be voted for depends up[illegible] number of ballots which may be had to-[illegible]

[illegible] the Senate adjourned, Speakers crowded [illegible] and became interested participants in [illegible] contest. Senator WIGFALL is perhaps the [illegible] active Republican manager, though the friends [illegible] Mr. GREY charge him with officiousness in his [illegible]

Mr. GREENLEY is bobbing in and out, as if everything [illegible] on his activity.

The election of FORNEY is pretty certain, although [illegible] positively decline say "bargain" to [illegible] effect.

There is no understanding about the other officers. [illegible] say South Americans vote for the plurality [illegible] they would probably have the selection of Door[illegible] or Sergeant-at-Arms, and name HOFFMAN, of [illegible]land.

[illegible] WISE and WERTELE are said to be arrang[illegible] for the printing spoils.

[illegible] last night were densely crowded with [illegible], including thousands of ladies.

The President has determined not to send his [illegible] to Congress on the day of organization, but [illegible] it with copies of the Annual Reports to [illegible] Northern cities for distribution to the Press, when [illegible] will communicate it to Congress the next day.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

[illegible]—INQUIRY INTO THE HARPER'S FERRY AFFAIR—COUNTER INQUIRY.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 5.

The Senate was called to order at 12 o'clock by the President.

[illegible] was then made by Dr. GURLEY, [illegible] Senators were present.

The credentials of JOHN C. THE ETON, of New-Jersey, and HENRY P. HAUN, of California, were presented, [illegible] and were qualified.

The vacancies were Messrs. Benjamin, Clay, Critten[illegible], Davis, Douglas, Fitch, Fitzpatrick, Ham[illegible], Johnson, (of Arkansas,) Polk, Sebastian, Sew[illegible] and Toombs.

Mr. MASON, of Virginia, submitted a resolution, [illegible] he would call up to-morrow, for the appointment of a committee to inquire into the facts attending the invasion and seizure of the Armory and [illegible] Harper's Ferry by a band of armed men, [illegible] whether the same was attended by armed [illegible] to the authorities and public force of the [illegible], and the murder of any citizens of Vir[illegible] by troops sent there to protect the public [illegible] whether such invasion was made under [illegible] organization intended to subvert the gov[illegible] of any of the States of the Union, the character [illegible] of such organization, whether any citizens [illegible] United States, not present, were implicated there [illegible] money thereto, by contributions of money, [illegible] or otherwise; the character and ex[illegible] of the military equipment in the hands or under [illegible] control of said armed band; where, how and [illegible] the same was obtained and transported to the [illegible] invaded. Also, to report what legislation, if [illegible], is necessary by the Government for the future [illegible] of the peace of the country, and the [illegible] of public property; the Committee to have [illegible] to send for persons and papers.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, gave notice that when [illegible] came up he should move to amend by [illegible] the inquiry to the seizure of the arsenal at [illegible] Missouri.

[illegible] resolutions were adopted to inform [illegible] of Representatives and the President that [illegible] is ready for business.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

UNUSUALLY LARGE ATTENDANCE—THE FIRST VOTE FOR SPEAKER—THE IMPENDING CRISIS.

Long before noon the galleries of the Hall of Representatives were densely filled, and crowds were unable to obtain admittance. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, there was the usual attendance of ladies.

On the floor there were the customary salutations among members and others, and pleasant excitement prevailed everywhere.

Mr. ADAMS, the Clerk of the last House, called the House to order at noon. The din of voices immediately ceased, spectators were excluded from the floor, and the members took their seats.

The roll was called, and 231 members answered to their names.

The absentees were Messrs. STALLWORTH and LANDRUM, of Alabama; BROWN and ADAMS, of Kentucky; [illegible] and ROW, of Arkansas; and MAHILSON, of [illegible].

On motion of Mr. PHELPS, the House agreed to proceed to the election of a Speaker viva voce.

Mr. HOUSTON nominated Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio.

Mr. ASHLEY nominated Mr. DAVIS, of Indiana.

Mr. HARRIS nominated Mr. HICKMAN, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. STEVENS nominated Mr. GREY, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. BOCOCK nominated Mr. BOCOCK, of Virginia.

[illegible] voices, impatiently—"Call the roll."

The Clerk appointed Messrs. Houston, Corwin, [illegible] and Briggs tellers.

Mr. PENNINGTON said: "In listening to the call-roll I noticed that several members were absent. In order to enable them to participate in the election, I move that the House adjourn till to-morrow."

Mr. JOHN COCHRANE—I hope the gentleman will withdraw the motion.

Mr. CRAWFORD—Oh, let us have one vote. (Laughter.)

The House took the vote by acclamation, amid [illegible] and laughter Mr. PENNINGTON withdrew his motion, and the House proceeded to vote.

FIRST VOTE FOR SPEAKER.

SHERMAN, 56; Bocock, 68; Grow, 43; Boteler, 14; Davis, 2; Phelps, 1; Gilmer, 3; Nelson, 5; Corwin, 1; Adrain, 1; Hill, 1; Hickman, 1; Pennington, 1; Haskin, 2; McQueen, 1; H. F. Clark, 1.

FOR Mr. PENNINGTON—Mr. Sherman.

FOR Mr. HOPKINS—Messrs. Heckman and Schwartz.

FOR Mr. McQUEEN—Mr. Pugh.

FOR Mr. CLARK OF NEW-YORK—Mr. Reynolds.

No one having received a majority of the votes cast, Mr. GREW rose and said: As I desire in no way to retard the organization of the House, I withdraw my name as a candidate. I assure those gentlemen who, in kindness, have cast their votes for me, that I shall treasure through life so distinguished a mark of their friendship and regard.

Mr. BUSHNELL moved an adjournment, to be determined by yeas and nays.

Mr. CLARK, of Missouri, wanted to make some remarks in favor of an adjournment after another vote.

Cries of "Go on."

Mr. BUSHNELL objected to his proceeding, saying there was no question before the House. He subsequently withdrew his objection, which was renewed by Mr. WASHBURNE, of Illinois.

The Clerk said he would submit the question whether Mr. CLARK should have liberty to proceed to the House.

Mr. GARNETT contended there was no power here to preclude debate, and said the gentleman from Missouri had a right to show that there were some nominees for Speaker who should not be elected.

Mr. CLARK insisted that the House could not deprive him of his constitutional right to make remarks as to the qualification of some of those nominated for Speaker.

The Clerk replied that he should not take it on himself to decide the question, but would submit it to the House.

Mr. CLARK (earnestly)—I claim the right as an individual member to speak. I deny the power of the House to deprive me of that right. I decide for myself.

Cries of "Go on," "Go on," "Good."

Mr. CURTIS—What part of the Constitution do you refer to? If you have that right, I have also.

Cries, thick and fast, "Call the roll," "Call the roll."

Mr. CLARK—I deny the right to call the roll while I have the floor.

Cries of "Question," "Question," from the Republican side.

Mr. KILGORE presumed this matter could be settled. The Republicans would consent to an adjournment after another vote.

Here the cries of "Question" were renewed.

Mr. CLARK withdrew his application to make remarks, and offered the following:

Whereas, Certain members of this House now in nomination for Speaker did indorse and recommend the book hereinafter named; therefore

Resolved, That the doctrines and sentiments of a certain book called The Impending Crisis of the South and How to Meet It, purported to have been written by H. R. HELPER, are incendiary and hostile to the domestic peace and tranquillity of the country, and that no member of this House who recommended or indorsed it or the compend, is fit to be Speaker of this House.

The reading of the resolution occasioned applause from some of the Southern men clapping their hands.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, said it seemed to him that in the present condition of the House but two things were in order, one a motion to adjourn, and the other to proceed to a vote.

Mr. CLARK resumed his remarks by saying, in view of the crisis of the country, and representing a slave-holding constituency, he would—

Mr. WASHBURNE, of Maine, called him to order.

Mr. CLARK continued, saying, we have had two wars since the Declaration of Independence, and have grown from a weak State to a great confederacy, challenging the administration of civilized world.

Mr. STANTON (interrupting) said he apprehended nobody wished to stay here, if the object was to save time, but he saw no good in remaining here, as he knew gentlemen on the other side could consume the day.

Mr. CLARK—My purpose is higher than that.

[Cries from the Democratic side of "Good!" "Good!" "Let's adjourn," "Let's adjourn."]

Mr. CLARK was willing to give way for that purpose.

Mr. STANTON thought this line discussion would be much more appropriate and better managed if the House were organized wit the election of a presiding officer.

Mr. WASHBURNE, of Maine, arose to a question, but Mr. CLARKE proposed to go on with his remaks, unless some gentleman wished to move to adjourn.

Mr. STEVENS—I hope we'll not adjourn. These things must come out.

A VOICE—"You're right."

Mr. STANTON—I see no good to be accomplished by remaining here unless we proceed to vote. I take on myself the responsibility to move that the House adjourn.

Decided in the negative by two majority.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM remarked that four Democrats were absent. Three of them might possibly be here to-morrow. Therefore he voted Aye.

Mr. CLARK resumed, but in a tone not altogether audible. He wished to show why the resolution ought to pass, and to present to the American people the position certain gentlemen occupy as regards the Speakership. Heretofore the people were divided as Democrats and Whigs; there was conservative and fraternal feeling; there was scarcely found an American citizen who advocated insurrection, robbery and dissolution. No party since this Government has had a history, however fond of power, has had, until now, so much disregard for the popular will as to send forth to the country at large a document advising the disfranchisement and murdering of a large portion of the people.

Mr. KILGORE, of Indiana, explained, and was understood as saying he condemned as strongly as the gentleman from Missouri possibly could, the avowal of such sentiments. He had never seen a recommendation to scatter them. His name, however, appeared to a proposition to publish and circulate a pamphlet containing matters taken from HELPER'S book, together with the remarks made by gentlemen on Slavery.

Mr. CLARK—I am glad the gentleman feels the wrath to come. [Laughter.]

Mr. KILGORE—I am ready to take the responsibility.

Mr. FARNSWORTH—We can act understandingly if the gentleman will have the book read here.

Mr. CLARK—I have the book.

Mr. FARNSWORTH—I don't believe the gentleman has read it. I recommend the literature. I have no doubt the book is a good one.

Mr. CLARK (resuming) felt it to be his duty to say if this Government is to be prostituted, and men placed in position holding such sentiments, the people ought to know it—know to what a humiliating position it has come. The chair they were now about to fill had been occupied by Clay, Barbour, Polk and Winthrop, gentlemen who had drawn light from the sources of the Constitution, who had elevated self-respect, and who would not advise treason, murder and dissolution. He said that he had that circular in reference to the circulation of the pamphlet before him.

Mr. CLARK E. COCHRANE (interrupting) utterly condemned such sentiments as those which the gentleman of Missouri had repeated.

Mr. PALMER said, let's have free discussion. Our friends on the other side having thrust the negro before the House, we may as well finish the discussion, and then turn him out as quickly as possible.

Mr. CLARK replied that the negro would never have been forced upon the House but for the action of the gentleman's party and for the advice they had given. If gentlemen made themselves the equals of the negro the effect would be to drive another class of the House on the first day of the session.

Mr. KELLOGG remarked that the gentleman from Missouri had made a statement that Republican members had, directly or indirectly, sanctioned certain things in HELPER'S book. His name having appeared in some of the papers as having recommended it.

Mr. CLARK—No doubt you signed it. (Laughter.)

Mr. KELLOGG—I am not prepared to say whether I signed the list or not, because the authority of the New-York Herald is not good.

Mr. CLARK—Nor any other good paper.

Mr. KELLOGG—The sentiments are not entertained by Republicans. I am willing that gentlemen should assume or disavow them. If I had signed the paper wrongfully I would avow it. I want the gentleman to state what is in the Compendium.

[There was much noise and confusion throughout the discussion, and the speakers were but imperfectly heard.]

Mr. CLARKE was prepared to show what was in the book if gentlemen were prepared to be placed on the anxious seat.

Without further proceedings the House then adjourned.

Massachusetts Liquor Trials.

THE AGENT AGAIN IN COURT.

BOSTON, Monday, Dec. 5.

Mr. BURNHAM, late State Liquor Agent, whose term of imprisonment for contempt expired on Saturday, was brought before the Police Court to-day, on a charge of selling adulterated liquor, but the trial was postponed, and his bail of five thousand dollars was continued.

THE VIRGINIA EXCITEMENT.

MEETING OF THE VIRGINIA LEGISLATURE

GOVERNOR WISE'S MESSAGE—HIS REVIEW OF THE HARPER'S FERRY TROUBLE.

RICHMOND, Va., Monday, Dec. 5.

The Legislature of Virginia organized to-day.

Gov. WISE'S message reviews the Harper's Ferry affair at great length. It speaks of the spirit of fanaticism, and the one idea of the Abolitionists which has seemed to madden whole masses of one entire section of the country, which enters into their religion, education, politics, prayers, courts of justice and legislatures, which has trained up three generations in moral and social habits of hatred to the masters of African slaves in the United States but turns not upon Slavery elsewhere which would have sent a rescue to assassins, robbers, murderers and traitors, whom it has sent to a felon's grave. Unless the numerical majority should cease to violate the confederate faith, and cease to disturb our peace, to destroy our lives and property, and to deprive us of all the protection and redress under the perverted forms and distorted workings of the Union, we must take up arms. The issue is too essential to be compromised any more. We cannot stand on the insults and outrages as these of Harper's Ferry, without suffering worse than death as citizens, and without suffering in dishonor the death of a State. It is not to be denied that we have many sound and sincere friends in the now slaveholding States, but the conservative elements are passive whilst the fanatical are active, and the former is past diminishing whilst the latter is increasing in numbers and force.

With regard to the insurgents, he says, it is a mockery to call them monomaniacs. If they were, then a large portion of the people of many of the States are monomaniacs. The leader himself spurned this plea, and it was not put in upon the trials. They were prompted by the evil spirits of incendiarism which demoralized a numerous host of enemies behind them, who now sympathized with their deeds before the world. These hired them, without themselves incurring the risk of their crimes, and no wonder they now sympathize with them even to madness, and that John Brown despised the hypocritical cant of their pretence that he was insane. The execution of our laws is necessary to wean future victims not again to be the tool of this sympathy. We have friends, or we have not, in the States whence these invaders came. They must now be not only conservative, but active to prevent the invaders coming. It was impossible for so much of such sympathy to exist without exciting bad men to action, rescue or revenge. On this he acted. He has been compelled by the apprehension of the most unparalleled border-war, to place the State in as full panoply of military defence as if foreign enemies invaded the United States. Indeed, one most irritating feature of this predatory war, is that it has its seat in British Provinces, which furnish asylums for our fugitives, and send them and their hired outlaws upon us from dépôts and rendezvous in the bordering States. There is no danger from our slaves or colored people. The slaves taken refused to take arms, and the first man killed was a respectable free negro, while running from the philanthropists who came to liberate the black race.

In closing the Message he says we must rely upon ourselves, fight for peace, organize and arm, demand of each State what position she means to maintain in the future in respect to Slavery and the provisions of the Constitution and laws of the United States and the provisions of the State laws for its protection in our Federal relations, and be governed according to the manner in which the demand may be answered. We are in arms. With regard to the reports and rumors of organized conspiracies to obstruct our laws, the Governor says, they were from so many sources, so simultaneous, so far apart, from persons so unlike in evidences of education, they could be from no conspiracy to hoax; but he relied not so much upon them as upon the earnest, continued appeal of sympathizers with crimes. Let us defend our own position or yield it at once. Let us have action, and resolve upon a definite settlement. No more temporizing with the Constitution—no more compromises. The other convicts await execution, and will be executed unless the General Assembly orders otherwise. This will meet the open invasion, but acts only on individual convicts, and don't settle the question of our peace and protection in the future. It remains only for me to offer myself, all that I am and all that I have, to the Commonwealth whenever she may order me or mine in service, when my term of office closes.

The second message makes detailed recommendations, and alludes to State matters generally.

PROGRESS HOMEWARD OF BROWN'S REMAINS.

TROY, N. Y., Monday, Dec. 5.

The body of JOHN BROWN, accompanied by Mrs. BROWN and WENDELL PHILLIPS, passed through this city to-day, arriving in the cars at noon and leaving at 6 o'clock for its destination. Little or no excitement was created during the time the body remained at the dépôt.

THE FUNERAL OF BROWN.

We understand that the funeral of JOHN BROWN will be attended at North Elba, Essex County, on Thursday next. We believe it is the intention of the prominent Abolitionists to take part in the demonstration. Many of them were anxious to have some public display in this City on the reception of his remains; but they yielded to the earnest resistance of Mrs. BROWN, who was decidedly averse to anything of the kind.

BROWN TO HIS SON IN OHIO.

DEAR CHILDREN: Your most welcome letters of the 16th inst. I have just received, and I feel to bless God that he has enabled you to bear the heavy tidings of our disaster with so much seeming resignation and composure of mind. That is exactly the thing I have wished you to do for me—to be cheerful and perfectly resigned to the holy will of a wise and good God. I bless His most holy name that I am (as I trust) in some good measure able to do the same. I am even "joyful in all my tribulations," even above my contentment, and I humbly trust that "I know whom I have trusted." A calm peace (perhaps) like that which my own dear mother felt in view of her last change, seems to fill my mind by day and night. Of this neither the powers of "earth or hell" can deprive me.

Do not, dear children, any of you, grieve for a single moment on my account. As I trust my life has not been entirely thrown away, so I also humbly trust that my death shall not be in vain. God can make it be a thousand times more value to His own cause, than all the miserable service (at best) that I have rendered it during my life. When I was first taken, I was too feeble to write much, so I wrote what I could to North Elba, requesting Reese and Anne to send you copies of all my letters to them. I hope they have done so, and that you, ELLEN, will do the same with what I may send to you, as it is still quite a labor for me to write all that I need to. I want your brothers to know what I write, if you know where to send them. I wrote JEREMIAH a few days since, to supply a trifling assistance, $15, to each of you as might be most destitute. I got his letter, but do not know as he got mine. I hope to get another letter from him soon. I also asked him to show you my letter. I know of nothing you can say of you do for me, unless it is to comfort your own hearts, and cheer and encourage each other, to trust in God and Jesus Christ, whom He hath sent. If you keep his sayings, you shall certainly "know of his doctrine, whether it be of God or no." Nothing can be more grateful to me, than your earnest sympathy, except it be to know that you are all fully grounded, to be Christians. And, now, dear children, farewell for this time. I hope to be able to write to you again. The God of my Father take you all to His children.

Your affectionate father, JOHN BROWN.

STATEMENT OF VIOLENCE DENIED.

CARD FROM M. E. LOWRY, ESQ.

ERIE, Penn., Thursday, Dec. 1, 1859.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: I have just been shown a statement, originating and appearing in yesterday's Cleveland Plaindealer, and copied also (with some improvements) into this day's Cleveland National Democrat, the substance of which is, that, on my way home from my recent visit to my old neighbor, JOHN BROWN, in his Virginia prison, while stopping a few hours in Wheeling, a Committee of the citizens of that place waited on me, rope in hand, and threatened my life if I did not leave their city within fifteen minutes, and that I, seriously apprehensive of danger, did make a speedy and cowardly exit from the town.

The statement has not the slightest foundation in fact. It is basely and maliciously false, in conception and construction, in whole and in part. Nothing of the kind ever occurred.

The article in question also attempts to throw discredit and reproach upon me for my connection with the "Erie War." Of course any incidental opportunity to malign and abuse the City for its resistance to corporate aggression and monopoly could not be allowed to pass. In reply to this feature of the shameful aspersion, I have only to say that the citizens of this City, of which I am one, have defeated, in all our Courts, local, State, and Federal, those reckless corporations which so persistently sought our destruction, and that (a fact which a foreign Press have never taken the pains to disclose) these same corporations, after an expenditure of a million of dollars in resistance, are now required and compelled to do and perform the things which they endeavored to throttle us for asking them to perform. M. E. LOWRY.

CORRECTION—REV. MR. SLOANE SETS HIMSELF RIGHT.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Dec. 5, 1859.

In the reports of the meeting, held on Friday evening in the Church of the Puritans, which appeared in your issue of Saturday morning, certain remarks are connected with my name which were made by another person. By inserting this correction, you will confer a favor. Respectfully,

J. R. W. SLOANE.

CITY POLITICS.

THE ELECTION.

The Engrossing Topic of the Election—Preparations for the Contest—What the Friends of the Candidates Say—Bets—Prospects of Fighting, &c., &c.

To-day occurs the biennial revolution of Gotham: not a contest with pikes and revolvers; nor yet, it is to be hoped, a combat of fisticuffs and bludgeons, but a silent fight, and a conflict of ballots, demonstrating how quietly a conglomerate, if not incongruous population may, in the exercise of the elective franchise, submit to the legally expressed will of the majority.

Our Albany legislators have wisely separated the Municipal from the State contest, with the view of loosening party ties and confining the issues to matters directly affecting the interests of our Metropolitan City. Yet the canvass has been, and probably will be to a small extent, conducted on almost as strong party grounds as ever before. Misguided patriots have insisted on boring the tax-payers with JOHN BROWN and the Charleston Convention when their main interest lay in the tax levy and assessment rolls. The talk about the election among the people shows this. The obstinate adherence of the rabid Republicans to OPDYKE shows it. Yet the popular movement of the independent Press for HAVEMEYER seems to meet with sufficient indorsement from intelligent voters, judging from the sentiments "of the pavement," to warrant a belief that the ties of party will not be so strong but that the people will express, in the election of a Mayor, the strong desire for good government, that resulted in the election of Mayor TIEMANN.

Luckily, all the parties are confident of success, and revel in the wildest of "the pleasures of hope." Exultant tax-payers rejoice in the delusive phantom of reduced tax bills; deluded tenants discern in the dim future the smiling faces of landlords reducing rents; Ward Associations felicitate themselves on the liberality of candidates; and everybody looks upon the day as big with the fate of the City for the next two years. But, as an orator said in his speech at the monster Havemeyer meeting at Cooper Institute, on Saturday night, "This community forgets to-day what happened yesterday, and the waters of Lethe pass over us once in twenty-four hours," it is not at all improbable that the election will be buried in oblivion, by some new excitement, before the sun gets a chance to penetrate the mist which has enveloped the City during the last few days.

Yesterday, however, all was preparation for the election. Job printers, ticket folders, bill posters, letter carriers, ticket-box makers, ropers-in of independent voters, registrars, inspectors, canvassers, clerks, M. Ps., challengers, and last, but not least, the expectant candidates—so anxious to serve the City in the Legislature, the Mayor's office, the Common Council, the Board of Education, or the exalted office of constable—looked forward to this long-expected day with mingled feelings of hope and dread. The interests of such varied classes of course affect a large proportion of our population, and the consequence was that everywhere the subject of conversation was "the election to-morrow." Even JOHN BROWN seemed to be eclipsed for the time being, and politicians generally, as well as the public at large, had to admit that the TIMES hit the public nail on the head when it devoted a supplement to a full account of the mammoth Havemeyer demonstration, and the terse biographies of the candidates. Much curiosity was evinced to know upon what specific information Mr. District-Attorney WAREBURY based his proclamation with reference to election frauds, and many knowing winks and nods among the Havemeyer and Opdyke men indicated that they, at least, did not think Mr. WAREBURY would be troubled by their parties. The mystery, however, still remained as to whether there was a design to mash or stuff the glass ballot-boxes, carry them off vi et armis, or steal a march by getting on the right side of the Inspectors. One imaginative person decided that there was a grand scheme on foot to secure a fortune of $100,000 by detecting 1,000 illegal voters, at the Mayor's liberal offer of $100 a head. The conversations of the adherents of the different candidates partook, as might naturally be expected, of a decided variety of sentiment.

TALK AMONG THE HAVEMEYER MEN.

From Tammany Hall down Nassau street, past the Post-office and the Custom-house, to Wall-street, little knots of Havemeyer men might have been seen discussing the event of to-day. As a general thing their countenances bore an exultant look—though that might be attributed to the fact that many of them have been "lost" since the installation of Mr. JAMES BUCHANAN into the White House. It is a fact, however, that the Havemeyer men are confident of victory. They count up Mr. JOHN VAN BUREN'S figures with broad chuckles, in this way: "The total vote will be about 75,000; the full Republican vote is but 24,000, and the remaining 51,000 Democratic votes can't be divided so that a Democrat will not be elected." Having arrived at this happy conclusion, the defeat of Mr. WOOD was then argued: "It is impossible that WOOD can be elected with the time-honored and never-beaten (by Democrats) Tammany organization, the well-paid Custom-house and Post-office, the respectable Press, the American Party, and the great body of the merchants against him, and in favor of HAVEMEYER." Not a few of the Havemeyer men chuckled over the five thousand dollar bet on their candidate, advertised in the TIMES yesterday, and wondered whether anybody would be fool enough to take it. In spite of the law disfranchising bettors on election, many wagers were made, with heavy odds on HAVEMEYER. Among others, Judge BEEKMAN is reported to have bet one hundred dollars that HAVEMEYER would carry the Sixth Ward. No little excitement was produced by the rumor that WOOD had printed a large number of handbills announcing the withdrawal of HAVEMEYER in favor of WOOD, and a similar announcement that he had withdrawn in favor of OPDYKE. The rumor was that these posters were to be flooded over the City late last night, so as to strike the eyes of idlers early in the morning, too late for a general and authoritative correction; so that in spite of their confidence in the strength of regular organizations, and popular indorsement, the Havemeyer men, from their knowledge of Mr. WOOD'S electioneering capacity, could not avoid a vague dread that the self-nominated candidate for the "Mayoralty" might, by hook or crook, slide into the City Hall on a minority vote, as he has so cunningly done before. Against the Opdyke men their indignation was no less active. They looked upon the Republican movement as entirely actuated by party motives, designed, not to elect a Mayor, but for some ulterior object, which some said was to insure the defeat of Tammany, and the election of WOOD, and others, the maintenance of the regular organization. It was openly charged that the managing Republicans were trafficking with WOOD to sustain him in return for his report to the much sought after, and by many supposed to be mythical, SEYMOUR HALL. In proof of this, it was urged that the Havemeyer posters throughout the City had been mutilated, while those of WOOD and OPDYKE were left amicably side by side; that WOOD'S tactics were to divide the opposition to him, and that he knew well how to do it. But the principal reliance of the Havemeyer men was evidently in the well-known capacity of their candidate, and his experience in the office for which he is named; in the known fact that the office seeks him; in his high standing among the merchants; and last, but not least, in the fact that the TIMES has taken such a decided stand in his favor, while a well-known political weathercock, known for always predicting the wrong way, opposed him. When the additional fact is considered, that the majority of the Inspectors of Election are Havemeyer men, great confidence was evinced that the vote of the City would be fairly canvassed, which, it was argued, was tantamount to an admission of Mr. HAVEMEYER'S certainty of being elected.

HOW THE OPDYKE MEN FELT.

Although confidently staggered, at first, by the nomination of Mr. HAVEMEYER, the Opdyke men confidently claimed yesterday that their stock was above par. His little confidence was created by the report that Mr. VAN VALKENBURGH, TRUMBLOW WEED'S right hand man, had come down from Albany with a bet full of money to bet on OPDYKE'S election. The known political sagacity of the editor of the Albany Evening Journal, and the statement that he was indirectly betting on their candidate, seemed to infuse new life in the Republicans, and the cry of "Vote for OPDYKE to defeat WOOD," was repeated more persistently than ever. They placed their reliance on the division of the Democracy, which they thought would be about equal. Taking Mr. VAN BUREN'S figures of a vote of 75,000, they calculated the straight Republican vote at 24,000, and the outside support sufficient to defeat either of the Democratic candidates. As regards the charge of favoring WOOD, they denied it indignantly, and argued that as HAVEMEYER had by far the best chance of the two Democrats, there would be no danger of electing WOOD by voting for OPDYKE. Indeed, there were confident whispers that WOOD intended to keep a corps de reserve to throw the balance of power in favor of OPDYKE, should there appear this afternoon the slightest chance of electing HAVEMEYER. They claimed for Mr. OPDYKE the united Anti-Democratic support; that now was the time for the Republicans to repeat the movement that resulted in the election of HAWE; that OPDYKE was sure of more than three-sevenths of the vote of the City, and that neither of the Democratic candidates could poll as much; that the Republican forces might better defeat WOOD by the election of OPDYKE than that of HAVEMEYER; that the Republicans had been sold after assisting to elect TIEMANN; that many of their party who at first decided to vote for HAVEMEYER had concluded subsequently, and would appear at the polls, to sustain OPDYKE; that the excellent police arrangements of the last few elections have tended to draw out the better class of voters, including a great majority of respectable Republicans; that their ratification at the Cooper Institute was fully as successful as the meetings of the other parties; that it was universally admitted that OPDYKE'S chances were improving hourly; that even if Mr. WOOD should be elected, Tammany Hall had herself to blame for helping him into power; and that upon the whole the best thing the Republicans could do would be to stick to their candidate at all hazards.

—THE WOOD MEN SANGUINE.

It appears to be generally conceded that Mr. WOOD has a stout representation of the "hard-fisted" on his side, and, whether on that account or not, his followers appear sanguine of his success. They count upon the First, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eleventh, Fourteenth and Twenty-second Wards as certain for Mr. WOOD, and enough of the others to make his election secure. They rely much on the effect of his liberal expenditure of the "sinews of war," in flags, banners, transparencies, Ward bonfires, torch-light processions, the eighty thousand autograph "Mayoralty" circulars, the remembrance of the 41,000 votes of the last canvass, the strenuous personal exertions of Mr. WOOD in speaking at the different Ward meetings, in the known sympathy for him on account of his having been legislated out of office, in the vigor with which many of his well-known Ward politicians are working for him, in the supposed diversion of the Irish vote in his favor, in the strength of the discontented "cuts" of the Custom-house, Post-office and the old Police, in the very bitterness with which he is opposed on all sides, which they think must create a reaction in his favor. As regards the estimates of the votes, they claim that the past Mozart contests with Tammany are no criterion; that the defeat of WOOD by TIEMANN shows that the indorsement of a Democrat by Tammany gives no certainty of his election; that Mr. WOOD'S vigorous and independent course while Mayor has secured him many admirers, and that by the division of the Opposition he stands as good a chance as ever he did for an election. So far as bets are concerned, they claim to be backed by as many bets as either Mr. HAVEMEYER or Mr. WOOD, and taking the estimate of 75,000 as the probable vote of the City, gave 30,000 to Mr. WOOD, with the remaining 45,000 divided about equally among the friends of Messrs. HAVEMEYER and OPDYKE.

WHIG GENERAL COMMITTEE.

MR. HIRAM KETCHUM WITHDRAWS FROM THE CHAIRMANSHIP OF THE COMMITTEE—A LIVELY TIME IN CONSEQUENCE.

The Whig General Committee held an adjourned meeting at TRAVER'S Hotel, yesterday evening. Mr. HIRAM KETCHUM occupied the Chair.

It was understood that Mr. KETCHUM intended to defend himself in the position he had taken in sustaining Mr. HAVEMEYER for Mayor. The opposition to hearing him was tolerably large, but Mr. KETCHUM'S friends proved to be in the ascendancy, and he was heard.

A motion to exclude the reporters having been lost, Mr. KETCHUM said:

"I was not in town at the last meeting; I sent a messenger to tell the Committee that I should not be in town. That messenger so reported. I knew not what would occur, but from the daily Press, I saw what did occur. There was a motion made requesting me to retire from the Chairmanship of this Committee, which was carried by a majority of those present. On what ground that motion was made I was not distinctly informed, but I su

SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

An American Coal-burning Locomotive—Rare Variety of Improvements—Progress and Prospects of the Locomotive.

The locomotive-engine, as the representative machine of this steam-propelled age, naturally occupies a lofty position in the popular estimation. To the mechanical inquirer, it is the highest adaptation and condensation of power; to the civilized world, like horses and oxen to the nomads, it is the great double-team of commerce, and as it tears over State after State, even to the antipodes, howling through gorges in the rocks, and anon tripping over gray bridges away up in the air, it is at once the orator's favorite illustration of terrific speed and strength, the congenial pet of Young America, and the standing admiration of everybody.

The regular and maintained speed, at 40 miles an hour, of an English coal-burner, with the remarkably economical results which we have detailed on another occasion, were calculated to make American machinists look to their laurels; but an examination of many of our own engines assures us, that, everything considered, surging, unjointed, rough and crooked roads, high speeds with heavy trains, the severity of our climate, and other adverse facts,—the American locomotive, as a steam-engine on wheels, though not so much as a cheap generator of heat, is a better machine than its British cousin.

The first engines used in this country were made in England; soon afterwards a few American engines were used in England and elsewhere abroad. For thirty years the locomotives of both countries have improved together, similarly in their essential features, and diversely in their adaptations to different service. An increase of size and power—the leading change in both—has been very salutary for heavy transportation, but extremely wasteful in friction and wear and tear, for light traffic. For this reason, especially if not exclusively in England, light engines have been recently introduced for light trains, with marked economy. The proportion of boiler surface and the distribution of steam has been essentially the same in both countries. The peculiar development of British engines has been their adaptation to the very high speed which their smooth straight roads allow, the use of wrought iron and steel in place of heavy cast iron, for the purpose of saving the repair, expense of machinery, and track, and the economical and smokeless combustion of raw bituminous coal. The American peculiarities, which are mostly in the running parts, have been the adaptation of the locomotive to weak, undulating and crooked tracks, by the distribution of the adhesive weight of the engine upon many points, (more driving wheels,) its equalization by special arrangements of springs and beams, (like scale beams,) to allow the whole to jump and surge without disturbing the engine proper, and the use of the truck (front wheels in a separate frame), to facilitate the passage of curves—British engines generally having all their wheels in one rigid frame. The use of light and strong materials, instead of heavy and weak cast-iron, is gradually and expensively working out its own remedy, and like our horrible railroad tracks, is the work of counting-room engineers. The high character of American locomotives arises from the fact that they have not been designed, as our roads have been, in Wall-street, and is almost wholly due to the enterprise and practical science of American locomotive builders, who, under the serious disadvantages of costly materials, limited capital, heavy losses, shamefully low and poor pay—far less than the pay of English makers—and under the remorseless and short-sighted beating-down of railway managers have produced a standard of work which entitles them to the first rank among the engineers of the world. These few lines of locomotive history were necessary to the full appreciation of the machine which we shall briefly describe.

A locomotive named J. J. Chatwood, recently placed by the Rogers Locomotive and Machine Company of Paterson, N. J., upon the New-Jersey Railroad, although embodying the leading principles which are a credit to all our locomotive builders, is especially creditable to Mr. HUDSON, engineer of the Rogers Works, for a variety of reasons. It embraces no less than four patented features together with some novelties not patented, and the many good points more or less adapted by the late THOMAS ROGERS, who is sometimes styled the father of the American locomotive. This engine, to the popular gaze, is more than splendid, it is glorious, with its rich decorations and fine proportions. Let no one shake their heads at the bright brass finish of our engines. It does not cost much, but it is of all other styles of finish the most economical, for it prevents the enormous radiation of heat—heat which has cost money and should be saved, and which dark and rough exterior waste.

The Chatwood is a large first-class passenger engine, with four coupled drivers 5½ feet in diameter, cylinders 18 by 22 inches, and weighs, in running order, about 55,000 pounds. The great improvement in the running gear is the Bissell truck, a device which is getting into extensive use here, and is already adopted in England. The whole truck, instead of turning on its own centre, slides sideways under the front of the engine, being held by a radius arm extending back under the boiler to a pin situated half-way between the centre of the truck, and the centre of the front driving-shaft. All the axles time work more nearly radial to any given curve in the road. No increased friction on curves is observed; the flanges of the truck-wheels do not bind against the outside rail; when the truck has once struck the curve, the flanges do not appear to touch at all. With the old truck, however, the wheels actually howl on short curves, from excessive friction, while rigid English engines would not stay on such a track at all, if it were not in the most thorough repair. Between the truck and the engines are a pair of inclined planes, on which the front of the engine rises a little on striking a curve, and which bring it as firmly to its place as on the rigid wheels of an English engine, on a straight line again, thereby preventing the sinuous motion of the common truck on straight tracks. This truck is therefore an improvement for all varieties of track; its benefits are not confined to curves only. The axles of this truck, as is now common, have both inside and outside bearings, each axle having four journals; but two beams instead of one, as is the ordinary practice, connect the outside bearings, and preserve the parallelism and stability of the boxes. The axles are also wide apart, (5½ feet,) spreading the weight upon a large surface of track, and allowing two incidental advantages: first, the use of large wheels, which of course run much more economically than small ones; and second, a level cylinder, which is placed between the wheels instead of over them, as was the old way, and thus preventing the general oscillation and wiggle caused by any up and down thrust of the piston upon the wheels. The valve-motion, for distributing steam in the cylinders, is both the link-motion, which is the regularly-adopted device in all countries, together with the variable cut-off. Since the celebrated Corliss stationary engines (now copied in England) work out their economy almost wholly by the valve motion, and since its principles have not yet been adapted to the locomotive, there is evidently a boundless opportunity for improvement. As a satisfactory essay on valve-motion would fill several quarto books, we can only say here that the device used in this engine is probably the best yet tried, but still it is not the thing desired and certain to be developed in due time. It enables the engine to save steam by using a little at high pressure, rather than a larger amount at low pressure, and it prevents much of the back-pressure incident to the common machinery.

The boiler and coal-burning accessories of the engine are in some respects peculiar, and in every respect successful. The addition of one or two cheap features highly valued in England, such as CLARK's steam-jet, for mixing the air and the gases at the surface of the hot fuel, would create still more thorough combustion. But, after a careful review of the history of coal-burning all over the world, it would appear that the general plan of Boiler both adopted, must become standard. There are, however, great merits in the water-tube system. The fire-box is of the ordinary size, and a plain combustion chamber, without expensive water shelves, extends from it into the horizontal portion of the boiler, to a depth of 29 inches. From this 154 iron flues, two inches in diameter, pass through the water into the smoke-box. In the mouth of this chimney is a pile or shelf of fire-brick, which promotes a mixing current of the gases, and by its heat sets them on fire. Air enters the fire-box, above the flue, from a row of holes under the door. This is a modification of the principle more expensively, if more thoroughly carried out on the celebrated engines of the London and South-Western Railway. ALLEN & HUNSON's patent grate is an important addition. The grate bars are so connected to a lever within reach of the fireman, that when the fire becomes clogged with cinders, or the coal is "caked," he can move them all, or "shake them up," cutting out the clinker, without wasting unburned coal, and without so disturbing the fire as to injure its intensity—common failings of shaking grates. The apparatus is simple and durable. HUNSON's patent diaphragm is another valuable feature. It is a partition of iron extending down from the top of the smoke-box to near its bottom, and is situated between the exhaust-nozzle of the engines (which draw air into the fire by creating a vacuum in the smoke-box) and the ends of the flues. The products of combustion pass under this diaphragm and then up chimney. The draft in the open smoke box is naturally through the central portion of the flues; this partition increases the draft through the bottom rows of flues, and thus converts them all into good heating surface. It also prevents the ready escape of heat up chimney when the engine is standing. COOKE's variable exhaust is also employed. The draft created by a variable portion of waste steam, rushing through a fixed orifice, is not always just that required by the variable call for fresh steam. Often too much is made, and if the door is not opened to cool down the furnace, (an objectionable practice,) it is wasted. Often not steam enough is generated, and the engine stops to breathe a while, not a very rare occurrence with heavy trains, and steam of a low pressure is used, which is highly wasteful of fuel. Generally the demand and supply of steam are about equal, since when much is used much draft is created. But an orifice of variable size always gives the engineer power to control the supply, and for this and various other reasons, is a good feature in coal-burning engines particularly. There are many other excellent points in this engine, not specially deviating from the practice of this house, and of the best American builders. It burns coal well, is remarkably and especially easy on the road, considering its power, and, we venture to say, will be very economical in the great matter of repairs.

There are still many additions to be made to the locomotive engine, which will surely promote its economy. Feed water heaters and independent pumps are already established abroad. But when railway directors declare that "an engine is an engine," and that they can buy a plenty of them at $7,500 a piece, they must expect to save cents and loose dollars, for our first-class builders have done nearly work enough for nothing. The fact that this engine embodies four patents, the particular horror of so many vexed and righteous souls, should teach us that a little professional discrimination may very easily select a great many good things out of the heap of rubbish that issues weekly from the Patent Office.

THE ADMINISTRATION AND UTAH.

Relations Between the Federal Government and the Territory—Non-Administration of Justice—The Army and its Cost.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

UTAH, Wednesday, Nov. 2, 1858.

It is a matter of some surprise that the state of affairs in Utah should excite so little apparent interest among the people at the East. With the exception of occasional articles in your own columns, the subject has been quite generally ignored by the Press.

The "mule sale," the "flour contract," and kindred transactions have been widely commented upon, but all seem careless as to the solution of the question how the Mormon difficulty shall be settled. Three thousand miles from the busy hum of the Atlantic cities, and connected by few ties of interest or affection, it is not perhaps unnatural that the people of this Territory should remain, as they are, rebels against the Federal Government, without exciting any remarkable feeling among those to whom Mormonism is only a name. The enormous expense growing out of the presence of so large a portion of the Army falls imperceptibly on the people of the States. Up to this time the Mormon war has cost them about $20,000,000, directly and indirectly, and a more unsatisfactory return for capital invested it would be difficult to find.

The Government has hardly a graver question to deal with than this—none surrounded with greater difficulties. The golden opportunity for a final settlement slipped from the President's grasp when he signed the proclamation proffering an unsought pardon to a people in armed rebellion to the authority of the General Government. Then there was open treason and overt act. Now a professed submission covers a rebellion as formidable as when Echo Cañon was fortified or the supply trains burned.

In the first place, it is to be borne in mind that the great mass of the population of Utah is of foreign origin, knowing as little of our laws and institutions as though they had never left the shores of Europe. There are, in round numbers, about 45,000 Mormons in the Territory, and it is safe to say that seven-ninths or eighth-ninths are foreigners. They come to this country, not to become good citizens, to enjoy our protection and obey our laws, but as blind followers of the head of the Mormon Church. They pass through our country, as they cross the ocean and that is all they know or care about it. Landing on the wharves of some Eastern city, they are hurried rapidly through the States, and when they have finished the long march across the prairies of Kansas and Nebraska, the authority of the United States is to them an unthought-of thing. Their spiritual and temporal head is BRIGHAM YOUNG, and to him alone they yield allegiance. His will is their law, their conscience, and their only guide. They are essentially a foreign people occupying this Territory, without a friendly or sympathetic feeling towards the Government whose civil officers they have so long resisted. Their submission to BRIGHAM YOUNG is as complete and unchanging as religious fanaticism and fear can make it. It surely can need no words to prove that BRIGHAM YOUNG is the ruler of this people in everything—politics, religion, submission or resistance to law, disposal of property, choice of associates, and the arbiter of life and death. He touches the wire, and the puppet moves to do his will. The faulty and good conduct of this people depend on the will of the few leaders of whom BRIGHAM is Chief.

What is the state of things here to-day? Every obstacle is thrown in the way of the administration of justice by the Federal Judges. The local Courts, known as Probate Courts, assume a jurisdiction as extensive as the United States Courts, and the people are directed to resort to them on all occasions. None but Mormon juries can be impanneled, and a Mormon does not convict a Mormon. Any other than a Mormon is as entirely deprived of civil rights as were our citizens in Mexico before the Mexican war. The Mormons act as an independent nation, and claim to be independent.

The startling incidents which have from time to time become known in the East, such as the Parish murder, the assassination of Sergeant FREE, almost in the presence of the Court before which he was being tried, and in the presence of a hundred Mormons, who raised not a hand to arrest, but aided the escape of the murderer, are fair indications of the state of things in Utah.

The Army has been here now for two years, costing yearly a sum sufficient to keep an army of over 25,000 men on the Missouri, and doing just about as much good as such an army would do. It is a galling position for the Army. Their presence is a positive and constant encouragement to rebellion—for, while the Army is bound hand and foot, the money disbursed so enriches the Mormon people that they would feel the withdrawal of the troops to be a great calamity. People that hardly knew the value of American coin when the Army came here now walk up to the mule sales with stocking-legs loaded with gold like a slung-shot. By-and-by, when the bills are to be footed there will be a great outcry against the Army—propositions to disband a portion, to cut down the pay, or some other process to make individual members refund by shpecies what has gone into the hands of contractors by thousands.

The only opportunity the President has had to use the army legitimately [illegible] will not retreat it. If the [illegible] we police guard, and not be [illegible] outbreak demands it. The army is only [illegible] the Mormons, as a people, are to be punished, and their rulers brought down from their high places. Under existing circumstances, no general collision can occur without the commander of this army assumes a great responsibility, and looks to the country for support. There is absolutely nothing tangible here for the Government to fight. There was no organized and armed resistance, actual high-treason—a levying of war—but now the Government encounters only a substantive front which heavely conceals a more determined and effectual resistance to the Federal authorities, than when Adjt.-Gen. MILES was found with the enrollment papers in his pocket.

Would it be a wise step to withdraw a portion of the army? It is the general impression here that this would at once tender Mormons bold and defiant, and precipitate a collision with them, in which a small force would be inadequate to the emergency. There is a wholesome awe of the power of the highly disciplined little army lying near the gates of Great Salt Lake City, waiting for the hand of its keeper to be raised. It is undoubtedly more than equal to any combination the Mormons can bring against it—but to weaken it materially would be to expose the remnant to a great danger. So let the army be used to fulfill the purpose for which it was sent here, or be withdrawn en masse. If the Mormons are peaceable and loyal citizens it is unjust to maintain the present attitude toward them. If they are treasonable and disloyal to the Government, it is equally unjust to the people of the United States to keep three thousand men here, costing millions of dollars each year, in a state of inaction, or doing only what the local Police of the Territory should do. The question as to the disposal of the army appears easy of solution. The ultimate settlement of the Mormon difficulty, whether a nation of polygamists shall be permitted to form a part of our common country, and how the evil shall be abated, is a political question, and as such, worthy of the most serious attention of the people. What ground the different political parties will take remains to be seen. OBSERVER.

The Mountain Meadow Massacre.

ARRIVAL OF DR. FORNEY AT ST. LOUIS WITH SOME OF THE SURVIVORS.

The St. Louis Republican announces the arrival in that city of Dr. FORNEY, Superintendent of Indian Affairs in Utah, on his way to Washington. The Republican states that Dr. FORNEY will visit Pennsylvania, and return thence with his family to Salt Lake City, for a permanent location. Two boys, who were the oldest survivors of the Mountain Meadow massacre, came in with Dr. FORNEY, and are now in his charge. These children were retained at Salt Lake in order that they might testify against the Mormons who were arrested and put upon trial some months ago on a charge of having shared in that atrocity. The other survivors, fifteen in number, being too young to be accepted as witnesses, were sent to Missouri, to be returned thence to their friends in Arkansas, in accordance with arrangements made by the Indian Department.

One of the children, now accompanying the Doctor, is nine years old, and named JOHN CALVIN SARRELL. The other named ARMORIS MYRON TAGGART is one year younger. Both are intelligent, sprightly little fellows, and hardy in health, notwithstanding the dreadful privations they experienced, after the murder of their parents by Mormons, and their own banishment to the fastnesses of distant and savage tribes of Indians. Several gentlemen, we learn, have applied to their present protector for permission to receive the boys into their keeping, and rear them in some useful employment. It cannot be granted, however, until word is received from Commissioner GREENWOOD at Washington, stating what shall be done with them. A telegraphic dispatch was sent to the Commissioner yesterday, announcing their safe arrival, and will be answered doubtless to-day by that officer. Dr. FORNEY expresses confidence in the belief that the guilty parties will yet be brought to justice. He has furnished the names of witnesses, and of the persons who, he feels confident, are the guilty instigators of the murder, to the Attorney-General.

From the New-Orleans Picayune.

MEXICO, Thursday, Nov. 17, 1858.

The robbery of the conducta by MARQUEZ, in Guadalajara, turns out to have been a deep-laid scheme, in which the Government of Mexico connived, to give a death-blow to the Liberal Party in the interior. Without the aid of the large sum so basely extracted from the convoy intrusted to MARQUEZ's good faith, DEGOLLADO and his forces would have marched upon Mexico, and decided the day in favor of the Constitutional cause. The immediate departure of MIRAMON from the capital, on hearing of the financial coup given by MARQUEZ, indicates the arrangement that had been previously made, and shows to what infamous expedients the Clerico-Military Party will have recourse, in order to establish their despotic sway over this unfortunate country.

The manifesto given by MARQUEZ, in which he attempted to extenuate the vandalic act, is an insult to common honesty. He and such as he may be satisfied with a code of morality of the character upheld in this infamous document, but every civilized nation will put the seal of reprobation upon the act and its attempted extenuation, and lend their moral influence to consign such proceedings and their authors to the execration they merit.

The pronunciamiento of MARQUEZ for SANTA ANNA turns out a hoax. He had possession, however, of the money.

MIRAMON was at last accounts at Queretaro, watching the Liberalist army, which was pressing on to the Capital.

The wealthy city of Oajaca had fallen into the hands of Canos, of the Church Party.

Another expedition against Vera Cruz is seriously threatened. The city is defended by 3,000 men only.

On the 13th Nov., Vera Cruz was visited with a very strong gale from the north, which caused considerable damage in the harbor, viz: a small Mexican schooner went on shore; the Mexican bark Loura parted her chains and went ashore, and is a total wreck; the American brig Amina, with a cargo of ice, hay, tar and lumber, parted her chains and went ashore on Mocombo Beach, five miles south of Vera Cruz, where she now lies sunk in the sand.

Her cargo, sold at public auction, brought $100; hull, $456. But little cargo remains in her—much of it having been washed overboard. Cargo and vessel insured in Boston. No lives lost on the above vessels.

Two gun launches, belonging to the Mexican Government, went ashore to the north of Vera Cruz. Three lives lost.

The following vessels were at Sacrificios:

The United States ship Savannah, French war brig Mercure, Spanish war brig Habanero. The United States screw-steamer Brooklyn arrived on the morning of the 31st, and anchored in the harbor of Vera Cruz, having on board the United States Minister, Hon. R. M. MCLANE, and family on board.

From the Rio Grande.

The Picayune says: We have been favored with the perusal of a letter, dated the 19th inst., to a gentleman of this city, from the keeper of the lighthouse at Point Isabel, in which the writer says the citizens there have been in much alarm from the proximity of the Cortinas band and the daily reports of their plundering and marauding career. They kept a vigilant look-out, however, and a cool bearing, determined to give the Mexican guerrilla chief a warm reception should he venture that way.

The keeper had his family, for safety, in the lighthouse, where he had also stored all the Government property he could; and, the stout iron door shut at night, he felt his charge tolerably secure.

By this time, no doubt, these apprehensions have been relieved, as CORTINAS would not be apt to scatter his forces for an out-of-the-way attack while there was such danger threatened him as there is now, on all sides.

Collision and Loss of Life.

LOSS OF PROPELLER MILWAUKEE—FIVE LIVES LOST.

The Detroit papers have the particulars of the loss of the propeller Milwaukee, and the death of five men, by a collision in the Straits of Mackinaw, Dec. 1, with the schr. J. H. Tiffany.

The crew of the schooner consisted of ten men, of whom five were saved. These were MORRIS TURNER, the Captain; JOHN TURNER, first mate; and FREDERICK MELLON, JOHN M. SMITH and HENRY MERRITT, seamen.

The following is a list of the lost:

HENRY E. GRAVES, second mate, from West Harwich, Barnstable County, Mass. He was a single man, about twenty-four years of age.

GEORGE SMITH, seaman; a Norwegian by birth, but hailing from Chicago. He was an unmarried man, and fifty-four years of age.

JOHN LUTTON, seaman; an Englishman by birth, but having no regular home. He last hailed from Halifax, N. S. He was married, and about twenty-five years of age.

It is extremely questionable whether either of the vessels can be raised, or any part of their cargoes recovered. The Milwaukee is the third propeller recently lost by the American Transportation Company, none of which were insured.

Safety on Railroads.

I notice a paragraph in one of the morning papers in reference to the late railroad disaster at Jersey City, in which it is stated that switches are in use on the Harlem and other roads which render accidents from misplaced switches impossible. Now this is strong language, and if the facts be as stated, I take it for granted that from this time forth our lives will be perfectly secure from this fruitful source of danger, because every Railroad Company will adopt them without delay, for humanity's sake, to say nothing about economy and self-interest.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

SERVER CITY, Thursday, Nov. 17, 1858.

The business of opening up the mining country here has just commenced, and of course new discoveries are made every day. The season being too far advanced for mining operations to be carried on as pleasantly as during the Summer months, more attention has been paid lately to searching out new diggings which shall pay when Spring opens. Portions of the country which were passed over daily last Summer without notice, are now found to be rich. Recently a miner, traveling the road which leads to Gregory's diggings, passed by a tree which had been turned up by the roots, and observing that the soil had the appearance of being decayed quartz, he took a pan of it to water at some distance, and on washing, obtained thirteen cents. The prospect is that a large tract in that neighborhood will be found to contain rich deposits, but on account of its distance from water, had been neglected. A ditch, five miles in length, will supply the lack.

In opening the road to the Colorado from this place, lodes of gold-bearing quartz have been found only twelve or fifteen miles distant. These, like the discoveries just mentioned, have been overlooked a hundred times. They have not, so far as I know, been prospected yet to such an extent as to test them, but the indications are that they will be found as rich as any yet opened. Should these prove productive as is supposed, it will vastly increase the area of the gold country, as no lodes have been worked within twenty-five miles of that place. New gulch diggings have also been recently discovered. The tendency is to keep all new discoveries a secret, in order that the discoverers may reap a greater benefit; for, should they be made known now, they would all be speedily taken up. So great is the tendency to seek for something better, that men frequently leave diggings where they are doing well, and go to those that are not as good, and only find out their mistake when it is too late.

I think that the future will show clearly that not one-fourth of the mining region is yet known. During the last Summer I often found native quicksilver in the beds of streams in sufficient quantities to amalgamate the gold, and in one lead I found what I considered to be cinnabar—the red sulphuret of mercury. Recently, native quicksilver has been found in leads, and in such quantities as to bid fair at some future day to supply our wants for mining purposes. In some instances it has been obtained from an ore resembling in its configuration bird's-eye maple—by crushing it and washing as for gold. Reports are still excellent from the Colorado. Many are intending to Winter there.

The miners who were recently frightened away from the twelve-mile digging, near Boulder, are returning to their work; the Indians having left. It appears that on the day previous to the one on which the Utes shot the man at that place, the whites had driven all the horses to a ranch some miles below thus preventing them from being stolen, and this appears to have enraged the Indians and caused the attack as a matter of revenge. Comparatively little will be done in that quarter this Winter, as those who have been most successful during the past Summer have for the most part gone to the States for their families and for the means and implements to carry on successfully their operations next Summer.

Capital is required in this whole country to develop it. In most instances much of both time and money must be expended before a return can be reasonably expected, and as in all mining countries all cannot expect to be successful.

During the past week I paid a visit to the immense quarries of marble with which the country is furnished. I have now before me a fine specimen of variegated white and reddish brown marble, which I obtained at Baden, ten miles from this place, at the base of the mountains. I have traced this out-cropping ridge for about seventy-five miles. Sometimes the marble disappears or gives place to sandstone, but it can be found occasionally along the whole distance, varying from pure white to all the varieties known. It is being extensively burned into lime and lately it has been quarried for building purposes. The lime made from it is of the finest quality. The strata is nearly perpendicular, and runs in nearly a straight line throughout the whole distance which I mentioned. Grindstones of the very finest quality are manufactured from the accompanying sandstone strata.

During the last week we have had some severe weather, as will be seen from the accompanying table, showing the height of the mercury in the thermometer, commencing with the first of this month:

	7 A.M.	2 P.M.	9 P.M.	Avr'ge.		7 A.M.	2 P.M.	9 P.M.	Avr'ge.
1—	27°	56°	29°	37½°	9—	18°	50°	24°	34½°
2—	38°	70°	41°	49½°	10—	26°	48°	45°	40°
3—	50°	66°	47°	54½°	11—	18°	19°	0°	9½°
4—	32°	66°	38°	45½°	12—	18°	19°	3°	13½°
5—	24°	52°	27°	34½°	13—	11°	52°	31°	31½°
6—	24°	62°	32°	43½°	14—	32°	52°	32°	42°
7—	32°	68°	40°	50°	15—	28°	47°	44°	41°
8—	32°	62°	40°	43½°	16—	43°	43°	32°	39°

On the 11th we had two inches of snow, and immediately the mercury went down to 18 degrees below zero, which is three degrees lower than at any time last Winter. It is warm again now, and the snow which was a foot deep in the mountains is nearly gone. This cold spell has nearly closed mining operations. Washing can no longer be done, and it is not probable that the water will again be warm enough before the warm sun of another Spring shall make it so. Digging in the dry gulches and leads, however, can be done as well this Winter as during warmer weather.

The election of last week was but a sham affair. Only about three hundred votes were cast, and though this election was gotten up expressly to assist Eastern Kansas to elect her delegate to Congress by the notorious JACK HERNDEGEN, yet, not more than fifty votes were cast for delegate, of which the majority were cast for MARCUS J. PARROTT. The better class of both parties were opposed to the election in toto, and the result of the vote has shown their disapproval.

So totally insufficient to regulate affairs here, is all the legislation of Eastern Kansas, that the general desire is to separate from her as far as it is possible so to do. I have never yet met with a single person who desired the connection between the two to continue.

Several trains have come in during the past week, bringing flour, clothing, &c. There appears, however, to be a great lack of some few articles, among which are bacon, candles, and shingle-nails. It is supposed that the first two articles will not last longer than Christmas.

Col. Don SAN FRANCISCO arrived on Tuesday from Fernando de Taos, having been only five and a half days on the road, being one of the quickest trips ever performed. He has on the road a large train of wagons loaded with flour. He reports that no new troubles with the Indians had occurred, and that KIT CARSON would be here shortly with some of the chiefs to have a talk with the whites and arrange so that no collision shall take place in future.

The Provisional Legislature is in session, and laboring prosperously in forming a civil and criminal code, together with other necessary laws. The indications are that the Provisional Government will not lack the support of the people. The legislature will compare favorably with those of the older States, and is composed of sober men.

This is by no means what should be called a windy country, yet old Boreas does get up quite an excitement sometimes. Last night several unfinished buildings were blown down. Last week a two-story building, 100 feet long, belonging to Dr. HICKMAN, was blown down; the roof had been put on, but the building was not sufficiently braced. The loss is quite heavy. One thing which speaks well for the progress of this town is the grading of the streets, which is still going on in spite of cold weather.

The carpenter's hammer and the mason's trowel are still plied with undiminished force, all indicating growth and prosperity. ARAGO.

From the Northwestern Boundary Survey—Interesting Letter.

I have recently received a letter from an officer of the Northwestern Boundary Survey, dated Sept. 25, and as it seems to contain items not before published, I think it may interest the public. The point he writes from is the "Similkameen," a branch of the Okinakane River, interesting as the point where rich gold discoveries are reported to have been made in the last news from the Pacific Coast. He says nothing about them, though his party is most likely to have found them. Gold in small quantities was found there as long ago as 1852, by an expedition to which I was myself attached at the time.

Your readers will also see what is the character of the country along the 49th parallel, and remembering that Fraser's River flows westward for a considerable distance, only a few miles further north, breaking through that very range of mountains, they may imagine what obstacles a Pacific Railroad, north of our boundary, would have to encounter, notwithstanding the flattering prospects which our Canadian neighbors are indulging in, on account of recent explorations for a route through British Columbia.

J. G. C.

"We have now finished up the survey to the Similkameen River, and all parties are working out of the mountains toward the Columbia. The amount of labor done has been very great considering the obstacles encountered. The width of the Cascade range here (lat. 49°) is more than one hundred miles, and its height formidable. When I tell you that Stevens,—though small compared with those of the Alps, are abundant, you can imagine what must be the pile of mountains. The Ki[illegible] will not cross the mountains this W[illegible] we have them in the rear. I have been [illegible] making a trail across for a pack train, and it has just finished. I expect to be at the new port called Colville, where our party was Winter[illegible] We will, therefore, have been the [illegible] on San Juan Island. I trust our Government will not allow itself to be bullied or cajoled out of those islands, which are the key to the whole Sound. It was distinctly understood when the treaty was made that the Straits of Haro were the boundary, and that we ceded nothing south of lat. 49° but Vancouver's island. Lord ABERDEEN made the proposition to Mr. MCLANE, meaning the Straits of Haro, and Mr. BANCROFT so described the boundary in the Senate."

MATTERS IN RHODE ISLAND.

A Union of Political Parties Effected—Constitution of the Republicans and Americans—Rev. Dr. Huntington's Unionism—Old Secession and Fusionism.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Tuesday, Nov. 2, 1858.

Two years ago a most unfortunate division took place in the ranks of the Opposition in Rhode Island. A "split," as it is politically termed, rendered the existence of two wings, whose fundamental principles were identical, but who differed, each from the other, on local and minor measures. Two political conflicts have occurred since the separation of the party, involving a State election and the Election of representatives to Congress. The American Republicans, as one wing was styled, completely triumphed in both elections, and placed THOMAS F. TURNER into the Gubernatorial Chair, and elected CHRISTOPHER RENSHAW to the National House of Representatives. Repeated attempts have been made by both wings, though the Americans acted more liberally and justly in the matter, to effect a union, but every endeavor proved fruitless and of no avail. Eternal obstinacy seemed to characterize both factions at times, the Republicans, however, manifesting more obstinacy than their opponents. No broad and national considerations appeared to actuate either party, who maintained their respective local position of more consequence than the influence of one harmonious, united party. A petty jealousy existed which prevented harmonious action, and the desire of certain men of both parties to get into office was another, if not, in fact, a primary cause of the unnecessary division.

But State politics are now settled, and a Congressional delegation is elected, and the people have opened their eyes to the necessity of preparation for the National campaign of 1860. They have begun to think that united action is the best guarantee of success, and, disregarding minor issues, have wisely come out and declared peace. The respective State Committees of the Republican and American Parties met yesterday, separately, to take into consideration the most expedient measures to pursue in the future. Propositions were made first from the Americans to form a union of forces, and after considerable discussion on both sides, a mutual agreement was effected. It was agreed that a call for a State Convention should be made, the call to be signed by the Chairmen of the two Committees, and the Convention to take place early in January next. The call should be for a Convention of all citizens opposed to the policy of the present corrupt National Administration—their basis to be the Philadelphia platform of 1856.

Such are the preliminary steps toward the formation of a complete coalition. It is a happy result for the people of Rhode Island, if this effort is successfully carried out, and equally beneficial to the country. The Convention which meets in January will probably determine the name by which the dominant party in this State will be known, and it is hoped that the people will accept the name it recommends, whether it be Republican or American Republican, and let a regard for the public welfare take precedence of selfish feeling.

The next session of the General Assembly will convene on the first week of January. Many important subjects will be introduced for the action of the Legislature. Among these may be mentioned the Colored School question, the contested and defeated Ives and HAZARD case, and applications for charters for horse-railroads in this city, the first and only ones in the State.

Some facts concerning the religious views of Prof. HUZZAREOR as promulgated in a sermon in Boston on Sunday, are communicated to one of the journals, (the Press,) of to-day. Coming directly from his lips so recently, they will be taken as the correct sentiments of Dr. HUZZAREOR, subject to any interpretation which may be placed upon them.

He believes in the atonement in the divinity of Christ, in the fall of the human race, and in redemption from sin, through the intercession and mediation of the Saviour. He does not call man a worm, but gives to him a moral agency with the ability of action, the knowledge of right and wrong, and power and judgment to discriminate and choose, but deems that the utmost humility, in the absence of all creeds, must be shown in the supplication for the favor of Christ. He opposes all easy opinions, and beliefs, that say but do not mean "My God, thou art my God." He does not admit the equality of Christ, and did not speak of the Trinity. He thinks Christ came from heaven, became man and suffered for man. That it was a divine mission, not a sacrifice. "He believes in one God, a personal father, His Son, our Saviour, a Divine Being, and our Advocate, and the Spirit, a vitality, a grace, a blessed teacher, and prompter of the right and true." He is opposed to all forms of religion that are but forms, and argues for a ritual Christianity. His authority sister that Dr. HUZZAREOR is the same man that he was years ago, and all unchanged in religious sentiment save that he may be more devout and more earnest.

The Aid Society of this City held an annual meeting on Sunday evening, at which Dr. WAYLAND, Prof. ANGELL and Bishop CLARK delivered addresses. The object of this Society is to furnish aid to the poor of the City who are deserving of it, and to discover the impostors from the meritorious. Pauperism in this City is quite abundant, and exists in the same classes as in other cities, and only about one out of three cases of appeal for assistance is deserving of notice. Every conceivable means is employed to leech out aid, and under most plausible stories we have people begging from door to door with sad and pitiful countenances. HIPPARCHUS.

THE NASHVILLE AFFRAY.

From the Nashville Union, Dec. 1.

The preliminary examination of ALLEN A. HALL, on the charge of murdering G. G. POINDEXTER, was commenced yesterday before Justices JOSIAH FRANKS, F. W. MAHEY, and JOHN COLEMAN. Attorney-General BATE, Hon. ANDREW EWING, and JOHN REID, Esq., were the Attornies for the State, and ex-Gov. NEILL S. Brown, Hon. E. H. EWING, and Judge JOHN S. BRIEN, Attornies for the defence.

Several witnesses were called for the prosecution. Mr. SIMEON VENABLE testified as follows:

I saw the difficulty which occurred on Cherry-street, which resulted in the death of Mr. Poindexter; it was immediately after I had taken breakfast, and I had taken breakfast rather late that morning; I had no watch, and could not say what the hour was; I was returning from the Commercial Hotel, where I had taken breakfast, going up Cherry-street on the pavement that leads by the News office; Mr. Poindexter passed me somewhere about Deaderick-street; I don't remember the precise point; he passed me on the right, walking rapidly; as he passed me, he turned his head and spoke to me, saying "Good morning;" I returned his salutation, saying "Good morning, Mr. Poindexter;" that is all that passed between us; the idea of a hostile meeting at that time between him and Mr. Hall did not occur to me, or I should not have been where I was when the occurrence took place; Mr. Poindexter continued, having passed me, to go before me on the pavement; he was going fast—faster than I was, which of course threw him in advance of me; in coming up the street I remember that I casually saw Mr. Poindexter as I might see any other gentleman, going before me on the pavement; but at the time the occurrence took place I was walking thoughtlessly, carelessly, at least so far as concerned Mr. Poindexter and Mr. Hall; the first thing that attracted my attention was a pretty loud exclamation, "stop!" I am satisfied I was not looking at any man at the time that I heard that exclamation, and if I was looking at anything it must have been the pavement; I raised my head, and I remember looking directly in front of me; I saw a man about the door of the News office, I think standing pretty much in a line with me; it was that which attracted my attention after hearing the exclamation "stop!" he had a gun in his hands; when the gun fired Mr. Poindexter threw his head forward, bringing his arms before his breast; at that time his umbrella and pistol fell; after that he made violent spasmodic efforts—stepping several times upon the pavement; he did not fall, as I before stated, instantly upon the firing of the gun, nor when the pistol and umbrella fell; in stepping upon the pavement, and making the spasmodic efforts that I have mentioned, he came towards me; I recollect distinctly that I saw his face; I recollect distinctly that I saw his feet move; he fell upon the pavement nearer to me than he was standing when he was shot; in the efforts that he made in his movements after he was shot he moved down the pavement in the direction that I was standing; he did not fall heavily upon the pavement; he sank gradually, coming down, as I remember, upon his right side; when I saw him sinking in that way I approached him, and assisted in carrying him into Mr. Childress' office, where he expired very soon.

Mr. W. C. WADSWORTH testified that he read HALL's card in the News while POINDEXTER was present. Witness added:

About the time I finished reading the article, Mr. Poindexter observed to me that it was pretty tight, or pretty severe; I replied that it was; he then said, it makes it necessary for me to take some notice of it, or make some demonstration; I replied I thought it did; said he "How?" I replied, "the when, the where, and the how, are matters of consideration;" he replied to me, "I am going to his office"—then conversation for the moment between us ceased; I finished my breakfast, and turned in my chair, and commenced reading the newspaper; I had been reading it some few moments, when Mr. Poindexter asked me if I was nearly through; I told him I was; he said, "When you are through I want to see you;" I got up then, and he also, and took me by the arm—remarking, "I don't know Mr.

WASHINGTON, March 3, 1857.

GEN: We are not willing to allow our connection, as members of your Cabinet, to cease without manifesting the sentiments which the retrospect of your public [illegible] official association has indelibly impressed on our minds.

We have witnessed, with satisfaction and respect, the untiring devotion to the public service, the ardent zeal for the good of the whole country, the purity of purpose, and the scrupulous observance of Constitutional principles which have been manifested by you in all times and in all circumstances. As the territory, population, wealth and power of the Union come to be more, so, in the same proportion, do the labor and responsibility of the administration of its affairs increase. Such have been Presidential periods when with it new events of national importance, and with new collisions of interests or convictions. Duty to the Constitution, free thought and free speech, every citizen participates in the conduct of public affairs, and in the severity and judgment of public opinion, the whole highest in place and in station is, of necessity, peculiarly subject, amid the passions and prejudices of the hour, to encounter censure where a better understanding of his motives and of his acts would insure commendation. We, who have seen you most, and with the fullest opportunities of appreciation, know, and we know ourselves, that in these years you have discharged the high trust devolved upon you with an honesty and independence, and with a zeal for the public good, which, the votes of impartial history will ratify our declaration of the integrity and patriotism of your entire term of the Executive power of the United States.

We desire to express our grateful sense of the dignified courtesy and considerate candor which have uniformly marked your deportment towards us, both in the consultations of the Cabinet, and in the performance of our respective Departments. This, while it has served to lighten our official labor and facilitate its performance, has eminently contributed to maintain a unity of administration, few examples of which occur in the annals of [illegible]

Affairs in Florence.

PROGRESS OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY—AMERICANS IN FLORENCE.

"I am surprised at the number of Italians I meet who frankly declare that they have not a particle of respect for the authority of the church in which they were born. Some of them go such lengths in their views, that one would think those who wished to be governed by principles of fairness, to be obliged to warn them not to go so far beyond the bounds of moderation as to do violence to religion itself. There are others, who are good Catholics, maintain their fidelity to the purely religious rites of the Church, but at the same time exhibit a spirit of protest which is every way noble and admirable. They love the faith of their fathers, but are able to distinguish between what that requires and the arbitrary exactions of an ecclesiastical authority which has little respect for the rights of the individual intellect. A society of Italians recently organized has taken a large room in one of the best localities in Florence, and meetings for communion and worship are now held three or four evenings every week. I am told that several hundreds sometimes assemble, and the worship is conducted after the somewhat simple style of our Methodist or Quakers. It is said that the interest and the numbers in attendance are increasing. I shall take an early opportunity to visit the place, and whatever may be mentioned connected with this movement—so novel and so significant—will be found interesting. Whoever wishes well to Italy, must watch such manifestations as these with [illegible] satisfaction.

The number of American visitors now in Florence is quite as large as usual. Reckoning the permanent colonists, the whole number cannot fall much short of three hundred. Mrs. Brown, the novelist, is established here for the remainder of the Autumn and a portion of the Winter, surrounded by a circle of friends. Mr. Sweetzer, our Minister to Rome, with his family, still remains here. The family of Mr. James S. Cooper, of New-York, at their temporary home in the Frescobaldi Palace, at their weekly conversaziones, are dispensing their hospitalities to large numbers of their countrymen, with quiet elegance and dignity. Mr. Charles Perkins, of Boston, is engaged in writing a History of Mediæval Sculpture. Mr. Jarves, of the same city, is making good progress with his work upon the art of painting in the same period. Mr. Jarvis' collection of pictures is increasing, and will be ready to be sent to America next year, when his book will be published. The family of Mr. Kinney, formerly our representative at Turin, continue to reside in Florence, and is the centre of an intelligent circle. As usual, Boston is more largely represented than any other American city, and by persons who do no discredit to that highly civilized community."

DISTURBANCE AT THE GREEN-STREET THEATRE IN ALBANY.—The Albany Times mentions a disturbance which occurred in the Green-street Theatre on Monday evening last. A New-York gentleman attempted to procure an encore of a song, and was remonstrated with by a special policeman for being too demonstrative. An Albanian defended the course pursued by the gentleman from New-York, and was ordered by the officer to leave the building forthwith. As he did not comply with sufficient celerity, the policeman applied his club with considerable freedom to the head and shoulders of the offender. The New-Yorker attempted to interfere, but was assailed with a knife by a brother of the policeman. Fortunately no serious wounds were inflicted, and the parties eventually left the building of their own accord.

THE WRONG MAN SENT TO STATE PRISON.—The Philadelphia Ledger, Dec. 5, says: "On the 17th of last month FRANCIS CARZA was tried and convicted in the Quarter Sessions of an outrage to a little girl, under years of age. The defendant was identified by the child, and there was other circumstantial evidence connecting him with the crime. Judge THOMPSON sentenced him to seven years' solitary and separate confinement, at hard labor, in the Eastern Penitentiary. Within a few days, however, it has been discovered that the wrong man has been arrested, and the friends of the accused, who heard of his difficulties only after the sentence, have applied for and obtained a writ of habeas corpus, in order that the mistake may be rectified, and on Saturday CARZA again made his appearance in the dock, to the astonishment of those who supposed he was working out his long sentence in the Penitentiary. In conversation with CARZA, we learned that he was in the County Prison over six months before his trial. During that time he neglected to inform his friends, owing to the nature of the charge, and being under no apprehension of a conviction, supposing, of course, that he would not be identified by the witnesses. He was therefore brought to trial without witnesses in his behalf, and the conviction was like a thunder-clap; he became reckless, and allowed the sentence to be passed without urging any objection. His case will be disposed of during the coming week."

ROBBERY OF THE SHAWNEE INDIANS.—The St. Louis papers report the arrest of one G. W. WELLS, for having in his possession, in Chillicothe, Missouri, of $4,000 belonging to the Shawnee Nation. He was captured and taken to St. Louis, and thence to the Nation for trial. WELLS has always stood high in Westport, and in the Nation, where he had numerous friends and acquaintances. He was educated in Ohio, and while in that State enjoyed the confidence of everybody who had opportunities to know him.

OBITUARY.

Hon. Alfred Kelly, a prominent citizen of Ohio, died at Columbus, Dec. 1. The Cincinnati Gazette says he became a member of the Legislature of Ohio shortly after arriving at twenty-one years of age, and served in that body with great distinction during several of the most trying epochs in the legislative history of the State. He was an early and constant friend of common school institutions. He was an efficient advocate of the plan to connect the Ohio river and the Lakes by Canal navigation. He was one of the acting Commissioners in the construction of the first canal, and thoroughly identified with the policy which controlled the work, and with the work itself.

The Omaha (N. T.) Republican announces the death of Hon. Fenner Ferguson, late Delegate in Congress from Nebraska. Judge Ferguson was a native of this State. In early life he removed to Michigan, and settled in the town of Albion, in the practice of his profession. While a resident there he was chosen to the Legislature for one term. In 1854, upon the passage of the Nebraska bill, he received from President Pierce the appointment of Chief Justice of Nebraska, and removed thither with his family in the Autumn of the year, locating at Bellevue. He was the Delegate from Nebraska during the last Congress, having been chosen in August, 1857. His seat was contested by E. B. Chapman, but without success, the House deciding in favor of Judge Ferguson.

De-jih-non-ka-wah-hoh, an exile from the Buffalo Reservation, writes to the Buffalo Express, from the Cattaraugus Reservation, announcing the death of John Jemison, in consequence of injuries received while at work among saw-logs. Mr. Jemison was a descendant of the noted "white woman," Mary Jemison, and at one time had quite a large property. The political agitation in 1838, among his people, deprived him of all. One of his sons was a physician and a graduate of the Fairfield Medical College. He entered the naval service, and died in the Mediterranean.

Alfred Kelley died at Columbus, O., on the 1st inst., aged 71 years. He was one of the pioneer settlers of Cleveland in 1809 or 1810, and in the latter year was admitted to the Court of Common Pleas as attorney. He has long been prominent in prosecuting the public works of the State, having been acting Commissioner for the construction of the Ohio Canal, and President on the construction of the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railway, and of the Lake Shore Road from Cleveland to Erie. Mr. Kelley has also acted as Fund Commissioner of the State, and as a member of the Legislature.

Mr. Josiah F. Caldwell, the last survivor of the children of Rev. James Caldwell, a revolutionary patriot, died recently at Washington, in his 86th year, having been born in Elizabeth, New Jersey, August 21, 1774. Mr. Caldwell's mother was shot by British soldiers in 1780, at Connecticut Farms, while she was engaged with her children in prayer.

Asa A. Gore, Esq., of Preston, Ct., died in that town on the 1st inst., at the age of 81 years and 5 months. He was the last survivor of the Wyoming Massacre, having been carried away, when a child, in his mother's arms. His father and all his relations but his mother, were killed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Mayor of Charlestown, Mass., visited Mystic Pond on Friday, for the purpose of making examinations in regard to the feasibility of obtaining a supply of water for the use of that city. Mystic Pond has an area of 220 acres and a depth of 70 feet, and its distance from City-square is six and a half miles. It is proposed to take the water of the pond at a short distance from it, where works are to be established to raise it to the required height, into a reservoir on Walnut Hill, from whence it may be distributed, with a head of nearly 140 feet, to the Cities of Charlestown and Chelsea.

The Sophomore class at Brown University has revived the custom of wearing the Oxford hat. It has been several times adopted at Cambridge; the last time by the class of 1855. But before two weeks had elapsed, in the last case, the hats ceased to make their appearance in public. They are now only worn by those students to whom parts are assigned on Commencement day, and by the President of the College on Commencement and exhibition days.

A young lady 19 years of age stopped at the Willis House, in Springfield, O., a week ago. She stated that she had been in a Montreal nunnery for 16 years, and that had she remained two weeks longer she would have been obliged to take the black veil. Some Baptist friends in Montreal furnished her with funds sufficient to enable her to reach Dayton, whither she was going.

A sea captain of Frankfort, Me., while at one of the English West India Islands, took a colored boy home with him to educate, at the urgent request of his parents. In the captain's absence from home, the boy has remained with his family at Frankfort. Some of the good people of the town became impressed with the idea that the boy was a slave, and without any very extended investigations, put him on the Underground Railroad and ran him off to Canada.

The long pending suit between the City of Boston and the Chauncey-street Church has been decided against the city, and the Church recovers $20,000 damages. Several years since the city laid out Chauncey-place as a street, and took land belonging to the Church Society, refusing to pay any damages, on the ground that by law the Society was not entitled to any. The Courts decide otherwise.

Mr. Douglas in Ohio.

From the Cleveland Plaindealer, Dec. 2.

Yesterday delegates to the Charleston Convention were elected in every Congressional District in the State. So far as the reports have reached us, she is Douglas all over. The Cleveland District, where the Administration opposition to "DOUGLAS and Popular Sovereignty" were most strongly concentrated, where Douglas men have been beheaded and anti-Douglas men appointed, where an Administration paper has been started, and the Administration patronage squandered by unprincipled and unscrupulous officials to put down popular sentiment, yesterday, in full Convention, unanimously elected Hon. H. B. PAYNE, who headed the anti-Lecompton movement in the State, and J. W. GRAY, Mr. BUCHANAN'S beheaded Postmaster, as Douglas delegates to Charleston.

PROGRESS OF THE PACIFIC TELEGRAPH.—The St. Louis Republican says: "The Overland Mail, with California dates to the 11th ult., inclusive, arrived at Warsaw, Mo., yesterday, twenty days out, and will be in this evening. It brings seven passengers.

Warsaw, from which this intelligence reached us, is fifty miles beyond Syracuse, the present terminus of the Pacific Railroad. It is the first station upon the new Telegraph Line now being built with a view of meeting, at some time, the line coming east from San Francisco, and bringing that city, from its present far distant location, within speaking distance of St. Louis. Two hundred and eighteen miles of wire are now up on this side, and one hundred and seventy miles on the coast of the Pacific. To complete the great distance still intervening, Congress will probably be applied to this Winter, and that body will, in all likelihood, return a refusal to the application. In that event the Company will proceed to do the work themselves, which, fortunately, they can accomplish. Nearly every line on the American Continent, not excepting the fragments of lines in California, are now, according to the late consolidation charter, obtained from the Legislature of New-Jersey, united in one interest, and under one management. Telegraph building does not cost much, have heavy means within themselves, and have a much greater business and a better paying tariff of prices from the public and newspaper press, than have ever been realized before in the history of telegraphing in the United States. The Company, our readers therefore will see, are luckily independent of a churlish Congress, and well able to complete this great enterprise without any aid whatever from Government.

AN IRRECONCILABLE DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.—A characteristic anecdote of Stephenson and Brunel is now current. Brunel was complaining to Stephenson that his (Brunel's) contractors were never satisfied and always quarreling with him. Stephenson returned that Brunel kept his contractors too much to the letter of their agreements, even when they had an equitable right to the modification of those agreements. Brunel still persisted that his view of the case was the right one. Stephenson answering that Brunel suspected people too much, the latter engineer replied, "I suspect all men to be rogues till I find them to be honest men." "For my part," returned Stephenson, "I take all men to be honest till I find them to be rogues." "Ah! then, we never shall agree," quoth Brunel. "Never," said Stephenson.

LAW REPORTS.

DECISIONS IN ADMIRALTY.

United States District Court, Dec. 5—Before Judge Betts.

COLLISION—LIGHT—LOOKOUT.

Simon Banks vs. The Steamboat Metropolis.—This was a libel filed by the owner of the schooner Golden Rule to recover the damages occasioned by a collision between the steamboat and the schooner, which occurred on the night of Aug. 15, 1856, in the Sound, near Faulkland Island, by which the schooner was sunk with all her cargo. The questions at issue were, among others, note whether the steamer kept a proper lookout, and whether the schooner had a proper light set.

Held by the Court—That the light on the sloop was proper, and was actually seen from the steamer in time for her to have avoided the collision, if the precautions incumbent on her to employ on such occasions had been taken.

That the speed of the steamer, which was about sixteen miles an hour, was not checked until the sloop was too near to be avoided.

That therefore the collision was occasioned by the fault of the steamer, and she must be held responsible therefor.

Decree for libelants, with a reference.

For libelants, Messrs. Owen and Vose; for claimants, Mr. Cutting.

EXCEPTIONS—DAMAGES—INTEREST—MUTUAL FAULT.

George W. Christopher et al. vs. The Ferry-boat Transit.—This case came up on exceptions to the Commissioner's report. The action was brought to recover damages occasioned to the pilot-boat Washington by a collision with the Transit. The Court decided it to be a case of mutual fault, and directed an apportionment of the damages. The Commissioner to whom the question of damages was referred reported the sum of $2,391 41 due to the libelants, to which the claimants excepted.

Held by the Court—That the exceptions must be allowed, and the report be referred back to the Commissioner for reexamination.

That on such reference clear proof must be given of the actual value of the schooner at the time the collision occurred.

That the Commissioner shall distinguish between repairs put upon the schooner for her general betterment and those necessary to restore her to her value at the time of the collision.

That no allowance be made for deterioration of the schooner except upon satisfactory proofs showing her condition and worth when the collision occurred.

That for demurrage must be allowed only time necessary to replace her in the condition in which she was at the time of the collision.

That interest on the damages is not to be allowed, the case being one of mutual tort, it being plainly inferable that this was in the mind of the Court in deciding the case on the merits, as each party was decreed to pay his own costs.

For libelants, Beebe, Dean and Donohue; for claimants, Mr. Gillman.

COLLISION AT THE DOCK.

Nathaniel Briggs et al. vs. The brig Adeline Sprague.—This was a libel filed by the owners of the barge Cherokee, to recover for injuries alleged to have been inflicted upon her by the brig. The libelants alleged that the barge was lying at the end of a pier at the foot of Delancy-street, East River, and that the brig was hauled along side of her to get around the end of the pier, so that the brig's anchor was driven into the barge's side and sank her.

The claimants allege that the brig was hauled up opposite the end of the pier, and that the barge came in between her and a schooner and inflicted injuries on herself, and that the brig was not hauled after the barge came there.

Held by the Court—That the brig was rightfully in that position, and that the injuries to the barge were occasioned by her own act in assuming the position that she did.

Libel dismissed with costs.

SMUGGLING.

The United States vs. One Parcel marked D. Fortezza, containing Diamonds, 4c.—This was a libel of information filed to forfeit the goods, as intended to be smuggled by the claimant on board the ——

Practice in Surrogate's Court.

SETTLEMENT OF EXECUTORS' AND GUARDIANS' ACCOUNTS.

David Banks, Jr. vs. Thomas C. Taylor et al.—This case came before the Supreme Court at the last General Term, held by Justices Roosevelt, Sutherland and Ingraham, on an appeal from a decree made by the Surrogate in the final settlement of accounts rendered by the defendants. The facts of the case were reported in the TIMES at the time, when the argument was pending.

Several questions were embraced on the appeal, but the principal point was whether accounts filed by defendants as "guardians," were properly passed on and allowed by the Surrogate; or whether his jurisdiction was confined, under the circumstances of the case, to the accounts which they submitted in their capacity as administrators. It appeared that the petition presented to the Surrogate by the defendants was confined to their character as administrators. It made no allusion to any guardianship for the children or either of them. It simply "stated that letters of administration on the estate of David Crocker, deceased, were granted to your petitioners on the twenty-third day of May, 1838," and that the petitioners were desirous of rendering a final account of all their proceedings to the Surrogate of the County of New-York, by whom your petitioners were appointed," and prayed that a citation might issue "to all persons interested in the estate of the deceased to attend a final settlement of the account of their proceeding." And, the citation so issued at the instance of the petitioners, and served on Mr. Banks, the appellant, required all persons interested in the estate (Mr. Banks being one) to appear before the Surrogate, at the time and place specified, "then and there to attend the final settlement of account of the proceedings of Eliza C. Crocker and Thomas C. Taylor as administrators of the goods, chattels, and credits of said deceased."

No amendment was subsequently made enlarging the subject or object of the petition as originally presented, and no averment even of any guardianship, except in the production of the letter of guardianship, to show who were entitled to represent the infant next of kin as such on the taking of the accounts of the administrators. On the contrary, the title of the proceedings, many times repeated, from the original petition to the final decree, was uniformly "In the matter of the final accounting of Eliza C. Crocker, Administratrix, and Thomas C. Taylor, Administrator, of David Crocker, deceased."

The opinion of the Court, rendered by Mr. Justice ROOSEVELT, has now been filed, deciding the case in favor of the appellant, as to the point above mentioned. The Court hold that order of the Surrogate allowing the guardianship accounts was coram non judice, and void. The clause should be, in the opinion of the Court, stricken out; as, although void, it might, if allowed to continue in the decree, create embarrassment. The Court therefore order that, if the parties consent, the decree of the Surrogate be modified by striking out the last clause but one, relating to the guardianship accounts, and in other respects affirmed, without costs; otherwise the case is referred back to the Surrogate to separate the accounts of the guardian from those of the administrators, and to pass only on the latter.

General Sessions.

THE DECEMBER GRAND JURY—RECORDER BARNARD'S CHARGE ON THE ELECTION LAW.

The December Term of the Court of General Sessions commenced yesterday, before Recorder BARNARD, with a large Calendar. The following gentlemen were impanneled as a Grand Inquest on the numerous cases yet waiting for indictment:

WILLIAM HARRENSHAW, Foreman.

William Adams,	Robert Hurst,
John Buckley, Jr.,	William Y. Clark,
William Edgar,	Frederick B. Elliott,
William Grayson,	George Griswold, Jr.,
Robert S. Haywood,	Thomas C. Ladd,
Albert H. Marshall,	James Nash,
Alex. A. Ogsbury,	George D. Phelps,
Nathaniel Prime,	Oliver B. Taylor.

The Grand Inquest having been sworn by the usual oath, the Recorder delivered his charge. After referring it to a consideration of the points prescribed by the Statute, the usury liquor, extortion, lottery and election laws, he proceeded to say, in connection with the election law, that the purpose of it was to prevent the expenditure of money by candidates for offices, in any way that could be considered bribery. Of late years the use of money has become so enormous an abuse that if it be not immediately stopped, elections in this City will be a mere farce, and a farce of the most ridiculous description. It is a well-known fact that nobody can now run for office without being called upon to expend all the money that he is supposed to have, and all the money that his friends may be disposed to raise for him. It is probable, said the Recorder, that to-morrow, being election-day, and an election day of unusual importance, the police, acting efficiently, will arrest many persons who are using money to obtain votes illegally. If such persons, Gentlemen, should be brought before you, it will be your duty to indict them, as it will be my duty to deal with them with the utmost severity of the law if they are convicted in this Court.

John Mannery, indicted for grand larceny, in stealing $250 from the cabin of the sloop Cabot, was sentenced to three years and six months in the State Prison.

Edward McWilliams was convicted of assault, with intent to kill, and was remanded for sentence.

Michael Fitzpatrick, tried for assault and battery, with intent to kill, was convicted of assault, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for one year.

Several minor cases were then disposed of, and the Court adjourned till Wednesday.

Injunction on Sale of Securities.

John T. Brinton, sequestrator, &c., of the Safeguard Insurance Company vs. Freeman Wood et al.—This case came up before Justice HOFFMAN at the Special Term of the Superior Court a few days since, on an order that defendants show cause why an injunction granted against them, enjoining them from selling certain collateral securities held by them, should not be made perpetual. The following is the opinion of the Court, in which the facts are stated:

HOFFMAN, J.—The case, on the defendants' own showing, is an account adjusted between them and the Company, by which it is found indebted to them in the sum of $14,096 63. For this amount they have received transfers of securities in amount over $100,000. Such a circumstance, unexplained, would raise a violent presumption of fraud in the whole concern. It is met by statements that these securities are not probably of sufficient value to pay the demands.

Yet in January, 1856, Keeler, then President, pro- [illegible] of these securities, which must result in a ruinous sacrifice. On the other hand, the defendants should be allowed to collect such securities as may be available, either by sale or pecuniary payment, giving security if required to account for the avails. Another course would be proper, but for some difficulties growing out of the position of the plaintiff. Unless he should be appointed Receiver by this Court, I cannot order the securities to be placed in his hands, in giving security to pay the defendants what may be due them. He must, to sue in our tribunals, and eventually to obtain a judgment, is different from a position as an officer appointed provisionally to protect the property. He must be an officer of this Court for such purposes. Whether he can ultimately sustain this suit is a point I do not now pass upon. (17 Howard, U. S. Rep., 327.) I am not prepared to say that as to a defendant here, and property here, he cannot.

All that can now be done, as I think, is to retain the injunction, but with a provision allowing the defendants to apply, whenever so advised, for leave to collect, receive or sue for any specified security of their assignee; or for leave to pay off prior liens and incumbrances, or any of them, or to compromise the same. They may also have liberty to apply for power to select any designated number of such securities, and to proceed to the collection thereof, giving security to abide the order of the Court respecting the same, or the award of the same, and surrend ering the residue to such person as may be appointed to receive the same. The order to be settled on two days' notice. No cost of this motion to either party.

Action for Slander.

WESTCHESTER NEIGHBORS AND THEIR COWS.

Harvey Sniffen vs. Robert McNiel.—This was an action for slander and malicious prosecution. The parties are neighbors in Westchester, the one having a yard and barn, and the other having cows. Now, it so happened, as appeared from the papers and proceedings in the case, that the cows of the one—the defendant—were mischievous, and got into the yard of the other—the plaintiff—that the plaintiff was away from home, and his wife, being much annoyed by the cows, had them driven into a barn or out-house, and there confined; that the defendant then went before a Justice of the Peace in the town of Rye, who forthwith issued a search warrant, on the oath of the defendant, by authority of which the Sheriff searched the plaintiff's premises. The plaintiff says the cows were not found in his possession, and defendant says they were. The plaintiff alleges that he attended the hearing before the Justice and the complaint against him was dismissed. The defendant says he directed that no further action should be taken in the premises.

The plaintiff alleges that subsequently the defendant circulated in all the region round about that he, the plaintiff, had stolen two of the defendant's cows, and demands that the defendant be compelled to pay him the value of his lost reputation.

The defendant denies that he is guilty as charged, and asks to be excused from cash payments.

The case was tried before Judge HIXSON, in the Common Pleas, and resulted in a verdict of $450 for plaintiff.

Relief of an Alleged Shoplifter.

The People vs. Sarah Stuart et. al.—This was a certiorari and a habeas corpus to obtain the papers upon which the defendant was committed, for review, and to have the body of the prisoner brought into Court.

It appears that the prisoner was in a store in Canal street, with a woman named Stanly, who stole fifteen yards of silk, and was arrested for the offence, together with the prisoner, who was supposed to be an accomplice. They were both committed by Justice Welsh on the charge of shoplifting, and this proceeding was for the relief of the prisoner, who is alleged to be innocent. The matter was brought before Justice Clerke, at Chambers, who refused to hear it, stating that the business of the Court should not be interrupted by such motions. Counsel for the prisoner said his client's interests were of as much importance as the dollars and cents of civil litigants, who claimed the exclusive use of the Court at Chambers,—that liberty was of more account than silver and gold.

The Court, however, postponed the matter until Wednesday.

Suit for Malicious Prosecution.

Thomas Brennan vs. Elbridge Maltby, E. P. Maltby, and John Anderson.—The plaintiff in this case was formerly a merchant tailor in Canal-street, but is now a lawyer. The defendants are wholesale dealers in cloths, in Barclay-street. It appears from the testimony produced on the trial, that in 1855 the plaintiff purchased cloths of the defendants, and obtained credit therefor, to the amount of about $180. The plaintiff is alleged to have obtained such credit by false representation, and the defendant swore that he stated to them that he owned a house in Greenwich-street, near Laight, worth $10,000, of which he promised to show them the deed the next day; that they went to his place several times to see it, but that he always had some excuse for not showing it, and never did exhibit such deed; that they went to other parties and learned that he did not own the house as stated. They afterwards had the plaintiff arrested on a charge of false pretences, which charge the plaintiff testified was dismissed by Judge Connolly. The plaintiff also denies that he ever made such representations as alleged by the defendant.

The case was tried in the Superior Court before Justice PIERREPONT, and is still on.

R. R. Dyett for plaintiff.

The Accessory Transit Company Troubles.

MOTION FOR OPEN COMMISSION DENIED.

Murray, Receiver, &c., vs. Vanderbilt.—This motion, and the nature of the action, has been several times reported in the TIMES. Justice JAMES now denied the motion for the open commission to California and Nicaragua, made by the defendant.

Wm. M. Evarts for the motion; John Sherwood and Henry A. Cram opposed.

ARTICLES OF DIET.—The useful articles of diet are numerous, and the commonest we have. As to the quantity required, the prize-fighter, who requires most, has thirty-six ounces per day, besides the innutritious portion which everybody swallows at every meal. For women, twenty ounces may suffice, though a larger allowance is better. Healthy working men ought to have from twenty-five to thirty ounces. The greatest amount of nourishment of both kinds is contained in flour, meat, potatoes and peas; milk, cheese, rice, and other grains, and sugar; while tea, coffee, and cocoa are of great value in their way. Such are the materials; but they may be so treated in the cooking as to waste what is most valuable, and preserve what is of the least consequence. It is possible to manage the making of a stew, so as to wash away the best qualities of the meat, and leave the vegetables hard, and drain away the thickening, causing a predominant taste of smoke and salt. When Miss Nightingale and her assistants undertook to cook in the Eastern Hospitals, they made a pint of thick arrowroot from one ounce of the powder, while in the general kitchen it took two ounces to make a pint of thin arrowroot. It was the proper boiling of the water that made the difference here. Again, two ounces of rice were saved on every four puddings, when the nurse made the puddings. Such incidents show that it is not enough to have the best materials for nourishment; they must be husbanded in the preparation. It seems probable that, by sensible conduct all around, everybody might command enough of the best material for food; and it is certain that a very small proportion of the wives of Englishmen know how to do justice to the food they buy.—Harriet Martineau in Once a Week.

THE MEDITERRANEAN SHORE.—As the lofties point is surmounted, a valley, with fields and homesteads, opens on the view, and ridges upon ridges of mountains—the furthest summits swathed in snow—cut clear and cold against the sky, or melt away into the misty distance. Here horses are changed and passports demanded at a tiny sheltered hamlet, with blacksmith's forge, gendarmerie, humble auberge, and murmuring mountain, so suggestive of Provençal Summer heat, trickling into its ample stone basin under a clump of hardwood trees; flocks of goats browsing on the short grass of the heights, once more covered by the hoary olive. Yet a few acclivities and declivities, and evening closed in as the fine sinewy steeds launched out cheerily at a good trot on a level road. Through Cannes, with its extraordinary patois, its villas, white-walled gardens, and neat English church, by rows of trees where myriads of glow-worms spangled the banks beneath; then skirting the sea, breaking with a hollow echoing sound in masses of surf on the shore, and looking gray and ghastly in the dim twilight; past Antibes with its gleaming Pharos on a jutting out headland, and there greeted our weary eyes, though only to vanish again, the distant lights of Nice twinkling above an expanse of leaden-like water.—Fraser's Magazine.

ONE REASON WE LAUGH IN ENGLAND.—This very day the tassel corns of Brighton bear the impress stamped upon them by their former acoustic processors. The meadow, the field, the well-stocked mill stream, the capacious barn, the grass more soft and luxurious, the hedgerows more civilized, show the footsteps of these oculist of scientific farmers, who labored, prayed and learned with a vigor and earnestness never outdone. Scholars, gentlemen, clergy, all in one, they exchanged the manual for the mattock, and wrought with hearty good-will at the stubborn clod or no less stubborn village serf. If he grew rich, it was no more than what John Wesley predicated of his followers. "Godliness is gain" applies equally to a brotherhood of monks as of Methodism. It was the law of necessity that from being poor the monk should grow rich; that his riches should be envied; that Naboth's vineyard should bring upon him the envy of the stronger. The vicissitudes and struggles of such a house cannot fail to be interesting; they cannot be without their worth as illustrating a main element of modern society.—London Times.

THE BRUTE WORLD, A MYSTERY.—Apropos of a "little Blenheim cocker," whose "moral tack was most amazing," and his liking and dislikings "really almost unerring," Mr. Carlyle (apparently his owner) has these remarks: "On the whole, there is more in this universe than our philosophy has dreamt of. 'A dog's instinct is a voice of nature too; and further, it has never blabbed itself away in idle jargon and hypothesis, but always adhered to the practical, and grown in silence by continual communion with fact.' We do the animals injustice. Their body resembles our body, Buffon says, with its four limbs, with its spinal marrow, main organs in the head, and so forth; but have they not a kind of soul, equally to the rude draught and imperfect imitation of ours? It is a strange, an almost solemn and pathetic thing, to see an intelligence imprisoned in that dumb, rude form, struggling to express itself out of that, even as we do out of our imprisonment, and succeed very imperfectly.—Bentley's Miscellany.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Thirty-sixth Congress assembled at Washington at noon yesterday, to hold its first session. From the Senate several of the leading members were noted as absentees, while in the House the members were remarkably full, two hundred and thirty-one members answering to their names at the roll-call. At the stroke of noon Vice-President Breckinridge assumed his chair in the Senate. After the close of the usual preliminary formalities Mr. Mason offered a resolution of inquiry into the Harper's Ferry tragedy—proposing to investigate the origin of the movement, the numbers implicated in it, the source from which money and the munitions of war were derived; and also to ascertain what legislation may be required to prevent similar outbreaks in future. He proposed to call up this resolve to-day. Senator Trumbull, of Illinois, en revanche, proposed a resolution of inquiry into the circumstances attending the seizure of the Franklin Arsenal, in Missouri, by an insurrectionary body, some years since. The usual communication announcing the readiness of the Senate to proceed to business, and to receive an Executive message, was ordered to be made, and the Senate adjourned.

An effort was made in the House to postpone the vote for Speaker, but the attempt failing, the sense of the members was tested by a single vote. It resulted as follows: Sherman, of Ohio, (Republican,) 66; Boocock, of Va., (Democrat,) 86; Grow, of Penn., (Republican,) 43; Boteler, of Va., (Administration Dem.,) 14; Davis, of Indiana, (Anti-Lecompton Dem.,) 2; Phelps, of Missouri, (Adm.,) 1; Gilmer, of N. C., (South American,) 3; Nelson, of Tenn., (South American,) 5; Corwin, 1; Adrain, 1; Hill, 1; Hickman, 1; Pennington, 1; Haskin, 2; McQueen, 1; Horace F. Clark 1. After a protracted fight, in which an attempt was made to fasten the responsibility of Helper's Impending Crisis upon the Republican candidates for the Speakership, the House adjourned.

The arrival of the Cahawba at this port supplies Havana advices to Nov. 30. They have been briefly anticipated by telegraph. Gen. Serrano has signalized the opening of his rule by displacing many of the public officers who have been acting under Gen. Concha, and selecting others. Extensive administrative and economical reforms are promised.

A correspondence which passed between the members of the Cabinet and Franklin Pierce, at the close of his Presidential term, has just been published. The Secretaries congratulated him on the success with which he had, in their opinion, discharged the arduous duties devolving on him, and the retiring President replied, congratulating himself that no defalcations had occurred during the four years in which he had controlled the destinies of the nation. He argued further, that the zeal with which his Administration had been defamed, and the vehemence with which it had been assailed, proved that it had been one of positive good or of positive evil.

The remains of John Brown are proceeding to their final resting place. Yesterday they passed through Troy, under the escort of the widow and Wendell Phillips. The funeral will take place at North Elba on Thursday.

Justice James, of the Supreme Court, has denied the motion lately made in the case of Murray, Receiver, &c. Vanderbilt, for an open commission to examine witnesses on the part of defendant in California and Nicaragua. The Court of General Sessions commenced for the December Term, before Hon. Recorder Barnard. A Grand Jury was impanneled, and the charge of the Court was delivered. With the exception of a reference to the Election Law, it had reference only to the points prescribed by the statute. With regard to the Election Law, the Recorder drew particular attention to the bribery which influenced votes in the City, and expressed his opinion that in a short time, if the action of the judiciary, strongly seconded by popular opinion, were not brought to bear thereupon, all Charter elections would be a farce. The Court of Oyer and Terminer met, for the commencement of the December Term, and adjourned until Wednesday. A very heavy Calendar is in prospective, including the trial of Macdonald for the murder of Virginia Stewart in Broadway, and from other cases of almost equal notoriety.

There is a gratifying decrease displayed in the mortality bills of the last week. There were not so many deaths by eighteen as there were during the preceding week, the total being 381. Compared with the corresponding weeks of 1857 and 1858 a decrease of 32 is observable in the first instance, and an increase of five in the last.

The Whig General Committee met last night at Niblo's Hotel, when Mr. Hiram Ketchum temporarily occupied the chair to give expression to his feelings on being requested to resign. After making his speech he left the room amidst respectful silence. A stormy time ensued on a motion to accept his resignation, but the chairman, Mr. Quiq, pronouncing the meeting that no such motion could be entertained, as Mr. Ketchum had resigned of his own will, on the application of the Committee an adjournment took place without further proceedings.

A lecture upon "The Transmission of Knowledge" was delivered before the Mechanics' Association last evening, by Rev. Dr. Bethune. Despite the inclemency of the weather, it was listened to by a full house, and afforded profound satisfaction.

The Stock Market opened dull yesterday, on the reduced prices of Saturday, but there was less disposition to press sales, except in Galena Shares, which fell to 60½ per cent. The market closed somewhat unsettled. New-York Central 80½@¾. There was another upward turn in Pacific Mail Shares to 99½ per cent. The Bank return this afternoon shows an increase on all the items, growingly, but of the City Taxes paid into the Sinking Fund Leather Bank.

The sales of Flour were moderate at essentially unaltered prices. Wheat was slightly dealt in, and was depressed. A fair inquiry prevailed for Corn, Rye, Barley and Oats. Pork was brisker and firmer. Lard, Beef, Groceries, Naval Stores, Linseed Oil, Hops and Tallow, were in moderate request. Rosins were actively sought after. Hay attracted good attention. Whisky was inactive. The Freight engagements were heavier.

Who Shall be Mayor?

If Fernando Wood is not defeated to-day, it will be simply because his opponents cannot determine which is the strongest of the two candidates running against him. At the lowest estimate, two-thirds of the voters of the City are resolutely hostile to his election. Party lines are to a very great extent broken down in this contest, and not less than ten thousand persons will cast their votes for the man who, in their judgment, has the best chance of defeating Mr. Wood. The operation of party machinery has succeeded in covering this point in a good deal of doubt:—and it is by no means impossible that the uncertainty which thus surrounds it may lead to such a division of the vote as will permit Wood again to resume official power.

One point, we think, is clear to everybody who has taken any pains to study the tendency of public sentiment. There are very many Republicans who will vote for Mr. Havemeyer, while there are very few Democrats who will vote for Mr. Opdyke. The Tribune roundly denies that any Republicans will support Mr. Havemeyer. We know better,—and so, we are confident, does every man who has taken the trouble to inquire. We could, of our own knowledge, name scores of Republicans who will do so,—and we have very little doubt that from three to five thousand Republican votes will thus be given to Mr. H., from a conviction on their part that he stands the best chance of defeating Wood. We have yet to hear of the first Democrat who will vote for Mr. Opdyke on the strength of a similar belief.

The power of the Democratic organization is a prodigious element in such a contest. No one doubts that the City is Democratic by an overwhelming majority. The Democratic vote is twice as large as the Republican. Every election fit to be made a test proves this conclusively. Now all experience shows that, whenever the interests involved make it worth while, the regular organization of the Democratic Party commands and controls the great body of its votes. In this way Wood was elected in 1856, and in this way every attempt seriously to break the Democratic ranks has been defeated. The only exception was when Comptroller Haws was elected over two Democratic candidates; but the reason of this was that both those candidates were unpopular, and that Geo. H. Purdy, the Tammany nominee, did not command the confidence of the party which had put him in nomination.

No such reason exists now. Mr. Havemeyer has the entire confidence and respect of the Democratic Party. Tammany Hall has every motive for doing everything in its power to secure his election. He will have every vote which discipline, energy, organization, money, zeal and the most strenuous exertion can possibly give him. He has every office and agency of the Federal and the City Government in his support. There is no reason and no motive which should or will prevent any member of the party from voting for him. He will get the entire Democratic vote, except those whom the hope of pay or plunder, the resentment of political griefs, or faith in the star of Fernando Wood, may draw away from the party ranks.

While Mr. Havemeyer has thus every political and party consideration in his favor, he has the additional strength drawn from his character, experience and standing in the community at large. The fact that he has been Mayor twice,—that his discharge of the duties of the office commanded then universal respect,—and that both parties solicited him to accept the post again, gives him a strong hold upon public favor and support, and will of itself secure him a large vote outside the ranks of his own party. He will receive also a very strong support from the Americans,—who, acting upon the Utica policy followed at the State election, have nominated him with Judge Brosson for Corporation Counsel;—and the German vote, without regard to party, will be very largely cast for him.

Under these circumstances, and without the slightest personal or party bias in the case, we cannot resist the conviction that he is certain to receive a much larger vote than Mr. Opdyke, and that votes cast for the latter will be virtually and practically thrown away. We believe that Mr. Havemeyer will receive, from the Democratic Party proper, over 20,000 votes, while the strict Republican Party vote does not reach that figure;—and that his chance of receiving outside support is at least twice as great as Mr. Opdyke's. It is folly to attempt any close estimate of votes on the basis of past elections: party lines are too much relaxed, and the circumstances of the cases differ too widely, to render such estimates reliable or trustworthy. The general considerations we have submitted will afford a much more reliable guide for the citizen who wishes so to cast his vote as best to aid the defeat of Fernando Wood.

Corporation Counsel.

The office of Corporation Counsel is not inferior, in influence or utility, to that of Mayor. It is quite as important for the welfare of the City, that this office should be filled by a man of ability and of character, as that the Mayor should be a man beyond reproach. The large salary attached to the office, the great facilities which it affords for illegal gains, and the extent to which depredations upon the Treasury depend for their success on the energy or inefficiency of the incumbent, combine to make it a matter of the utmost importance that it should be filled by a man who enjoys the entire confidence of the whole community.

We are compelled to say that in their nominations for this office both factions of the Democratic Party have been more fortunate than the Republicans. Mr. Hull is not generally known, either to the lawyers or the people of the City. He has resided here comparatively a short time,—has achieved no distinction at the bar, and cannot justly be said to have won the confidence of the public at large. His nomination took the mass of his own party by surprise; and we have full and explicit warrant for saying that a great number of the most prominent and influential Republicans, especially among the members of the bar, do not intend to give him either their influence or their votes.

A circular has been prepared and issued from his office, or at least with his knowledge and assent, in which Messrs. D. D. Field, W. C. Noyes, W. M. Evarts, and other well-known Republican lawyers, indorse his professional and personal qualifications, and commend him warmly to public favor and support. We are authorized and requested to state on behalf of these gentlemen that they have never signed any such document.

Judge Brosson, the candidate of the Mozart Hall wing of the Democracy, is universally known to be a lawyer of eminent ability and a man of the highest integrity of character. Mr. Tilden, the candidate of Tammany Hall, is equally well known, and deserves to an equal extent the [illegible] and it is said [illegible] would permit him [illegible] for Mayor. This fact of itself affords a very strong proof of the importance which Mr. H. attaches to this office, and of his confidence in Mr. Tilden's ability and disposition properly and efficiently to perform its duties.

Northern Sentiment.

The Richmond Enquirer publishes under the head of "Demoniac Letters," an anonymous epistle from Vermont, in which the writer menaces Gov. Wise with swift destruction if he dares to execute John Brown. It does this for the purpose of showing the people of Virginia "the demoniac spirit that prevails among Northern men." In order still further to enlighten the people of Virginia on this point, it publishes a resolution declaring the right of slaves to rebel, and the duty of the North to aid them,—which is said to have been passed at a town meeting in Natick, Mass., Senator Wilson being present, but taking no part. And it closes its list of evidences for the present by copying the call for a meeting of sympathy for Brown in Rochester, at which "Parker Pillsbury and other able advocates of Freedom," are advertised to address the meeting. Upon this it exclaims:

"After reading that specimen, (the letter,) let the people of Virginia turn with complacency from this anonymous murderer by the sword or by poison, to a public notice of a meeting of the 'Friends of Freedom' in the town of Rochester, N.Y., not a hoax, and inquire for themselves, 'Are these the men with whom we are living in union? Is this fraternal union? How long are such things to be tolerated? What are the conservative men of the North doing?'"

Let us answer these queries. The "Conservative men of the North" are waiting anxiously to see whether their conservative brethren of the South are willing to see Northern sentiment thus glaringly misrepresented, on such an utterly inadequate and absurd basis. They are wondering whether the Richmond Enquirer really regards the menacing balderdash of a fanatic too cowardly to sign his name,—the resolutions of a handful of fanatics at a town meeting in Massachusetts, and the fulminations of a notorious disunionist like Parker Pillsbury, as evidences of Northern sentiment, or as a correct and reliable indication of Northern feeling. We assure the Enquirer that they find it very hard indeed to believe that it does not know better. They themselves are not in the least inclined to underrate the wickedness and folly of the sentiments thus expressed;—but they cannot believe any intelligent and influential journal in the country so ignorant of the Northern people as seriously to hold them responsible for their utterance.

"How long," asks the Enquirer, "are these things to be tolerated?" We answer, "Forever." Toleration is the law of the land in this section of the Union. We cannot suppress the utterance of such sentiments,—much as we may detest and abominate them. Lynch law,—tar and feathers,—expulsion, are not weapons by which we can shut the mouths of fanatics, or stop the clamors of disunionists and traitors. The South does not understand, and therefore misinterprets this forbearance. Because we do not lynch Parker Pillsbury and Wendell Phillips,—because we do not set a mob to break up the gatherings of those who go to hear them,—the South infers that we indorse their sentiments and approve their action. This is unjust and absurd;—and every reflecting man, North and South, must so regard it. The Enquirer can find abundant proof, if it desires or is willing to see it, that the great mass of the Northern people do not approve the Abolition sentiments which they tolerate nevertheless. If it is not satisfied with this evidence, or persists in ignoring it, we may regret but cannot help it. We cannot establish intolerance nor resort to lynch law, even for the sake of convincing the South of our fraternal love. So far as the North is concerned, these things must continue to be "tolerated," and we do not see any more clearly how the South can interfere practically and efficiently for their suppression.

We renew our call upon the Conservatives of the South to interpose their influence against the mischievous and perilous misrepresentations of Northern sentiment of which these are specimens. They must know how utterly unfounded they are, and what serious evils they are likely to inflict upon both sections of the country. They must see what pains are taken, by leading organs of Southern ultraism, to conceal from the people evidences of Northern Conservatism, and to force them thus into a position of resentment and hostility. They, and they alone, can protest against this injustice, and preserve the South from the perils which it involves.

Clamorous Confidence.

It will not do to attach too much importance to the clamorous boasts of the Tribune that Mr. Opdyke's election is certain,—and that under no contingency can his vote be less than Havemeyer's. These confident claims are among the most hackneyed and worthless of the clap-trap machinery of political partisans. By affecting confidence, whether they feel it or not, they hope to sweep into their current the unthinking crowd who catch their opinions, as they would the small-pox, from exposure to contagion,—and who are very apt to believe that such extravagant faith must have some foundation in fact.

Before yielding to this belief it will be well to bear in mind that in the contest of 1856 the Tribune held precisely the same language concerning Mr. Bleecker which it now holds concerning Mr. Opdyke. The two independent Democratic candidates were sure to divide the party vote:—Mr. Libby was certain to get the contractors, jobbers and miscellaneous hangers on of the party, while Judge Whiting would take the great mass of Democratic respectables, who were in favor of reform and were disgusted with Fernando Wood. The case was perfectly plain. The great mass of the independent citizens, who preferred the public good to party success, would rally for Bleecker. The Americans were doing very wrong to run a candidate,—but their votes could not seriously affect the result:—and Mr. Bleecker was sure to be successful.

This was plausible, confident and impressive. It was in the same vein as the Tribune's appeals to-day on behalf of Opdyke. Yet here is the significant comment which the election returns afforded:

Fernando Wood (Dem.)	34,596
Isaac O. Barker (Am.)	25,168
A. J. Bleecker (Rep.)	9,071
James S. Libby (Ind. Dem.)	4,664
James R. Whitney (Ref.)	3,638

The Tribune had talked of Barker precisely as it now talks of Havemeyer: he stood no possible chance: his party were deserting him daily, and rallying to the support of Bleecker, as the only man who could defeat Wood: the one two were really the only candidates in the field; and every citizen who did not wish to throw away his vote, and aid indirectly Wood's election, would be sure to vote for the people's candidate.—A. J. Bleecker.

The result was, and still is, instructive. The regular organization of the Democracy was too strong for these guerrilla attempts to break it: the Americans did not see fit to follow the Tribune's advice,—and its prophecies and claims met with an ignominious refutation. It is at least possible that a similar fate may overtake those which, in the same vein and for the same end, it is making now.

A Good Party Policy.

The notice which is annually issued to the laborers of the Central Park, warning them that their vote can in no way affect their position on the works, and that the only thing which the Park expects of them is a fair day's work for a fair day's wages, is not simply sound political economy and sound morality, but, for the party which instituted and has enforced the rule, it is the best possible policy.

We could not in any way supply the Republicans with a better illustration than that which they have themselves here furnished of the superiority of right right, even in a party point of view, over the best laid and most dexterous party dodges. The Commission which took possession of the Park three years ago, was mainly Republican in its composition, and was the object of general suspicion and dislike on the part of the City. It was supposed, as a matter of course, that the Park would be managed in accordance with the time-honored traditions of partizanship,—and that, in accordance with the good old rule, all the men would be expected to vote for those from whom "they got their bread and butter." Owing to some mysterious dispensation of Providence, and perhaps next to this, to the thorough good faith and integrity with which the Architect-in-Chief entered on his duties, the Central Park has been kept out of the mire of politics, and it is to this day not only the first public work from which the laborers were not driven to the polls, but the best public work which has ever been executed in the country, and that which inspires every man in the North with the strongest hopes as to our material progress, and gives the strongest assurance of the great capacity which we possess for the cultivation of the beautiful as well as of the useful.

Now there is no denying that the Republicans might at the outset, and for a long while since, have extracted from the Park from 2,000 to 3,000 votes at every election; and as a natural consequence it would have been constructed entirely with reference to political considerations, and every shift which promised to bear fruit at the polls would have been resorted to. But whether by accident or by good will, a different policy has been pursued. The Park has been kept, to the great dissatisfaction of a good many energetic Republicans of undeniable party fidelity, strictly neutral ground. The result is that there is probably nothing in the whole history of the party which at this moment reflects so much credit on them in the eyes of the people, which has inspired so much confidence in their integrity of purpose, and which, if they would but persevere in the course which the success of this work seemed to indicate as the only true one, would have done them so much service hereafter. That course was apparently based on the principle which they had laid down for themselves for the Mayoralty election in 1857, that the good of the community is always to be considered before the good of party, and that in fact there is nothing which can be considered with so much party advantage.

It requires some self-restraint, no doubt, for a thorough-going partisan to see a few thousand votes before him with nothing but honesty and patriotism to prevent his getting them, but it is a species of self-restraint which the public is sure to appreciate, and in the long run to reward. So, also, it would, no doubt, have required some self-restraint, perhaps a good deal, on the part of Republican leaders, to have refrained from "punishing Tammany Hall," and "revenging itself" on all sorts of people for all sorts of slights and insults, by refraining, in the interest of the City, from splitting the votes of honest men, and thus giving Fernando Wood a good chance of the Mayoralty at this election; but it would have been a species of self-abnegation from which a great deal more party profit would have been reaped in the long run than is ever likely to be produced by the glory of a separate nomination, or even of a victory at the polls. There are victories in politics as well as in war which are worse than defeats—victories which are purchased by exhaustion and demoralization, and which render a second triumph impossible.

Carrying Deadly Weapons.

A curious illustration of the extent to which the habit of carrying weapons and using them recklessly is being carried, was afforded by a boatman named Kirby, employed on board a barge at the foot of Delancy-street, on Saturday morning. A number of poor little girls were picking up refuse coal in the neighborhood. He desired them to desist and go away, and by way of emphasizing his order, fired a loaded pistol into the group, wounding a child eleven years old mortally. The statement of the fellow before the Coroner, was almost as curious as the crime with which he was charged. He "fired the pistol to scare them away, and did not intend to do any injury."

If the use of deadly weapons advances in the same ratio among the lower classes at the North as it has done during the past ten years, we shall soon have friends waking one another up in the morning by discharges of buckshot in the back; fathers silencing noisy infants by stabs of a bowie knife, and laborers on the wharves attracting one another's attention by balls from a pistol, aimed at the head. A large mass of the workingmen of the City now go to their daily labor armed, as if Indians were lying in wait at every corner, and there was no such thing as law or police in the City. The mere fact that a man has weapons on his person is in some sort a temptation to use them, and the greater the temptation to use, the less the value set on human life. It remains with the Courts and juries to repress the practice, and they can readily do so by steadily regarding the possession of a concealed weapon by the prisoner an aggravation of all assaults or homicides. The act against carrying concealed arms is a mockery, and can never be enforced; but if an example were made of every man charged with doing something, which he would not have done if he had left his "Colt" at home, playful savages like Patrick Kirby will try and forget their shooting apparatus when going to their work in the morning. We hope that, pending the reform, he at all events will meet with his deserts. Stabbing and shooting in a fray may now and then be palliated, but the discharge of a loaded pistol into a group of little girls, is an act which no full-grown brute ought to say he committed without meaning to do harm. A person whose playfulness manifests itself in this fashion, is clearly entitled to such an experience of the pleasures of imprisonment and hard labor as may chastise his animal spirits.

The Meaning of this Election.

Mr. Fernando Wood and the Herald are not alone in their endeavors to addle the minds of quiet citizens with vague notions of tremendous "national" consequences to follow the strictly municipal election which takes place in this City to-day. The supporters of Mr. Opdyke, who certainly might have been expected to know better, are quoting all manner of trash from the organs of the Republican Party in the country at large, to show that the stake at issue in the contest of to-day is the "strengthening of the influence of New-York in favor of Republican principles and organization." The official journal of the Republicans of Ohio, for instance, kindly informs us that our "election has, for the first time in several years, become interesting to the Republicans of the country." The adoption of this language by the Republican leaders in this City fully bears out all that we have said in regard to their real disposition in this matter. They are fighting not to secure a good government to New-York, but to make a "brilliant party demonstration." Now, this is all wrong: as wrong as wrong can be. Our election of to-day is a strictly municipal affair. We are not making or unmaking Presidents. We are indorsing no conceivable programme of national politics. The one object with which every citizen who truly feels the weight of his civic duties will go to the polls to-day will be the choice of honest and capable men to administer the domestic affairs of this great City. We want a Mayor who will maintain order and justice with an impartial hand, a Corporation Counsel who will keep an active and energetic watch over the financial interests of his great constituency, public officers who command and deserve the public confidence. This is the simple sum of the whole business. And the hundreds and thousands of Republican citizens who shall vote to-day for Messrs. Havemeyer and Tilden, will do so simply and solely because they know these gentlemen are fit to be entrusted with our municipal concerns, and because they believe them to be the only fit persons whose election can be made certain against the intrigues of a desperate and determined demagogue.

Steam on Common Roads.

Now that a British steam-carriage is in actual and regular service in the United States, while not one American steam-carriage is in such service in this or any other country; now that English machinists are supplying not only the roads of South America, India and Australia, but districts all over the world that have no roads, with traction engines, while American mechanics, whose plans are already proved to be better, have not secured the first liberal encouragement; now that steam vehicles are employed in the streets of London to haul loads which horses cannot conveniently draw, while the more practicable carriages which sometimes venture in our streets, draw only the anathemas of our progressive people; now that steam-wagons are in the actual service of the British Government, while the authorities of our own City have refused to license public steam vehicles to run within its limits; it is time for us to glorify ourselves upon a second stride in national progress and wealth. The first was the surrender of our transatlantic trade to the iron screw ships of foreign countries.

We are wont, in every-day phrase, to style ourselves a "smart people," and the English, "plodders and old fogies." Yet it somehow happens that our neighbors are a trifle in advance of us chronologically, if not intrinsically, in the little matter of steamships, in the minor item of steam-agriculture, in the trifling sundries of puddled steel and coal-burning locomotives. Our prowess in the manufacture of clocks, tools and Yankee notions, is indeed unquestioned, and our sailing vessels may be counted by the hundred, (in our docks,) but people are so exacting now-a-days, that they will doubt our entire preëminence in the arts of engineering if we allow the Europeans to slip ahead of us in any particular. Let us, therefore, devote a passing thought to the subject of steam on common roads, to see if there is really anything in it worthy of our distinguished consideration.

Steam-carriages ran successfully on common roads in Great Britain before railways were introduced, and were driven off by the extreme and unrelenting opposition of the land and stage-owners, backed by the House of Lords. Railways evaded, and by more brilliant promises, overcame this opposition, and superseded the common road service of both steam and horse coaches. What was the result? In attempting to cover the whole ground their proprietors have saddled themselves with $1,500,000,000 worth of way and equipment, two-thirds of which has been sunk because the traffic was not in proportion to the outlay. The conclusion, therefore, that railways, at $170,000 per mile, and capable of a regular speed of fifty miles an hour, are hardly necessary for a traffic which may be economically accommodated at fifteen miles per hour on the public highway, and at a less working cost than that of horses at six miles per hour—this conclusion is not sufficiently outrageous to evoke legislative opposition in England.

Meanwhile, in the United States the Stock of railways that penetrate the wilderness of new States, for hundreds of miles, has not been above par in all cases. Even in well settled New England districts, short branch roads have not been found to pay interest, even at slow speeds. Railways between cities and through populous towns are indeed the foundations of our national wealth; but the accommodation of small, short, stage-coach traffic, and the feeding of main lines by splendid, level and costly roads of iron, has been found to pay about as well as would the running of the Great Eastern between New York and Staten Island.

Shall our rural districts, i. e. several hundred thousand miles of highway, depend forever on horse-power at six miles an hour, or can this speed be doubled, or quadrupled, and that at a reduced expense? Here are boundless regions cut off from progress, isolated from enterprise, and dammed out of the channel of wealth, by the simple want of cheap and rapid communication with great steam highways. Is it totally impossible to open up this comparative wilderness by any known means short of railroads, at forty thousand dollars a mile? After steam-carriages have run on our common country roads at eighteen miles per hour, up inclines steeper than one in ten, at a far lower cost than that of horse-power, without injury, but rather with positive benefit to the roads, with ease and safety, and under the most thorough and absolute control as to speed and direction, we think it would be advisable to withdraw both public and private obstacles, and to allow them a fair chance at regular service. If British mechanics and capitalists would be sure of a market for their products in this country, they would soon place on our roads a class of vehicles which will really do the work proposed for the steam-carriage in absolutely bona-fide [illegible] speed upon all the present stage and omnibus lines in this country, and to open fields for which such a speed would create the necessity, would give an almost unknown impulse to internal and national enterprise, trade, manufactures, production and wealth. In the steam carriage the required machine. If so, why should we punish ourselves for half a century, or for half a year, in delaying to put it at its work? If not, let us try something else at once. We know what railways will do, and we know too well what they will not do. Meanwhile the great roadless country suffers for the want of adequate means of communication.

A Microscopic Miracle.

A Scotch divine, Dr. Cumming by name, has just been frightening his canny fellow-countrymen out of their wits by a tremendous blast on his apocalyptic trumpet. He has issued a book which bears the dreadful title of The Great Tribulation, and which sets forth, with a minuteness and precision of detail unknown to the inspired prophets of old, the manner and form of certain vast calamities which are about to overtake the earth, cast down all existing institutions, and bring on the final conflict of Armageddon through a universal upheaval of the human race. The Doctor's volume is sufficiently formidable; but if we are to accept as authentic and exact the description given of the Doctor's person by one of his admirers, his outward man must be in the [illegible] interesting and as wonderful as [illegible] and thoughts. We are informed [illegible] annihilation is "very small [illegible] not exceeding five feet four or [illegible] in height," and that "his face is [illegible] beautiful over seen, although [illegible] to be called strictly handsome [illegible] face, which is too diminutive [illegible] strictly handsome, is of itself [illegible] curious phenomenon in the way [illegible] when we come to the question [illegible] our amazement knows no [illegible] "beautiful face," it appears, "[illegible] hester, with a deep demure [illegible] countenance which seems to be [illegible] deep purple marble is certainly [illegible] human nature so we have ever met [illegible] the Arabian Nights, and somewhat [illegible] the edge from another position [illegible] remarkable theologian, which in any [illegible] remarkable than he might challenge [illegible] cial attention. The deep-purple-marble [illegible] aforesaid possesses a pair of eyes [illegible] have to be taken like the Doctor's [illegible] nations on faith, since "they are [illegible] by a pair of invisible spectacles!" [illegible] we have a perfect pendant to the [illegible] history of Prince Leander, who was [illegible] CHARED" from all inquisitive eyes at the most important junctures of his career by an "invisible cloak." We must presume, however, that the spectacles of Dr. Cumming came to him like Dogberry's "reading and writing," by nature, since so reverend a person can hardly be suspected of collusion with elves and fairies. Purple marble cheeks and invisible spectacles do not exhaust the attributes of this singular physiognomy. The "lower part of the Doctor's face," we learn, "is as perfect as that of some Greek statue with the addition of beautiful teeth." Imagine a copy of the Belvidere Apollo in free-stone, adorned with one of those glittering mastication machines which enterprising dentists expose to public admiration on red velvet cushions at the doors of their offices, and you will have a lively image of this beautiful but not "strictly handsome" little Chrysostom of the Kirk!

We admit that we burn with an eager desire to look upon so marvelous a creature, and that we are fully disposed to endorse the verdict of his panegyrist, who winds up by saying that his hero "would be incomparable, were he only magnified." These are the golden days of microscopic science, but what discoveries can remain to be made in the watery realms of the infusoria at all worthy to be named with the vision here suggested? Let some aspiring disciple of Hufeland at once lay hands upon the Scottish doctor, and subject him to the double lens. Seen through a sapphire, for instance, what a splendid consecration of charms he would present to the enraptured gazer's eye! Allison's "Unveiled in the Sun" would grow dim in the comparison, and show as the red globes in a country chemist's window show beside the Drummond light on the battlements of Barnum's Museum.

A Sharp Home Thrust.

The Virginia papers have resented with great heat, the comments of the Northern Press upon the enormous parade and fuss made by their authorities over the affair at Harper's Ferry. They have professed to find in them evidences of our sympathy with the invasion, and of our contempt for the rights, the peace and the honor of a sister State.

Not for the sake of taunting Virginia, but merely in self-defence, we copy the following paragraph from the Charleston, (S. C.) Mercury, of Nov. 28. The source from which it emanates silences all questions as to its motives, and we submit it to our Virginia cousins as proof that one need not be an Abolitionist to hesitate about applauding and indorsing the recent demonstrations in that State:

"We are satisfied that every intelligent man in the South has been completely disgusted at the tone and pathetic farce that has been played out before the public about the hanging of that hoary villain, 'Old Brown.' From the 300 invaders in possession of Harper's Ferry, and the 1,000 negroes carried off to the mountains of Pennsylvania—from the further invasions and threats of invasion—the arsenal and fears of arsenals—the marches and counter-marches of the praises and cutcastings of poetas—Governor Wise, the energetic, and his troops—down to the final offers of military aid offered by Gov. Gist of South Carolina to the Governor of Virginia, for the purpose of making certain the aforesaid hanging of Old Brown. Co—it is a tissue of disgust, exaggeration and nonsense sufficient to stir the gall of any Southerner, who has regard for the dignity and responsibility of the Southern people. To us it really looks as if those in possession of the telegraph were in league to ridicule the South and make us a laughing stock to ourselves and before the world. We sincerely trust that our Legislature, which meets to-day, will bear this in mind, and take no action whatever in regard to ourselves or our institution, that may even have the appearance of being prompted by the Virginia farce and its terrorism."

AROUSE! AROUSE!

FOR HAVEMEYER
AND
GEORGE OPDYKE.

[illegible] Opdyke in Dodge Ward [illegible] Tuesday Away Upon this Header.

To-day the question must be decided whether Fernando Wood or George Opdyke shall be the next Mayor of the City of New-York—whether politics [illegible] or purity shall triumph. We say the issue is between Wood and Opdyke, for Mr. Havemeyer has [illegible] a chance of success. The most zealous partisans of Tammany Hall give up the fight so far as their candidate is concerned. No prominent Tammany man will put on 10,000 votes for Mr. Wood. The meetings in his favor have resulted in failures. The Wall-street mass meeting of his friends in Groton and Wood. The carmen's meeting at Union-square consisted of about 50 people. The meeting at Cooper Institute, on Saturday evening, was said by the public Press to be "cold, [illegible] and spiritless." This lukewarmness on the part of the people towards Mr. Havemeyer is [illegible] by the fact that all understand that this Tammany Hall ticket is put forward as the tool of Tammany Hall, and that it is only by the [illegible] of political [illegible] that votes are rendered on this Continent. By this ticket Mr. Havemeyer has brought odium upon his name. He has rejected the people and refused to be [illegible] for Mayor irrespective of party, but [illegible] that vote for the use of his name it is [illegible] on the success of the party. The public know these facts, and hence Mr. Havemeyer is repudiated by all respectable and responsible citizens. Havemeyer has consented to be a party to a base purpose—he has consented to assist a den of thieves—he has [illegible] himself to be a mere partisan—in short, he is the tool of Tammany Hall. Hence our citizens will [illegible] him.

Public Sentiment Setting in Favor of Opdyke.

The public Press, or that portion of it opposed to Fernando Wood, have, within a few days past, [illegible] Mr. Opdyke as the only available candidate against Wood. The Evening Post, the Sunday Courier, and the New-York Times, the New-York Herald, have [illegible] their former advocacy of Havemeyer, and, within the last three days, have either openly advocated Mr. Opdyke's election or acknowledged his strength. On Saturday the Herald, the bitterest enemy of the Republican Party, said as follows in its editorial leader:

"From the recent meeting of merchants held in New-York in favor of Opdyke, the Republican candidate for its Mayoralty, and from all appearance and [illegible] in MONEY TRIBUNE REVIEWER [illegible] the tide is now setting in strongly in his favor. The signs are also changing hourly from Havemeyer to Opdyke. The only fear is, that Mr. Havemeyer will not secure enough votes from the Democracy to defeat Wood. If he does, then GEORGE OPDYKE is the next Mayor. Wood is the enemy to fight against. By all means, let Mr. HAVEMEYER remain in the field to split Wood's vote of the east. The floating vote is all setting upon OPDYKE, as the following instances will show:

A few days ago a test vote was taken in an eating house near Washington Market, in a company composed of butchers and market boys, who are usually Democrats, with the following result:

Total vote	462
For George Opdyke	191
For Wm. F. Havemeyer	138
For A. Wood	133—462

Of these votes, of those who voted for Havemeyer, there were about thirty who said they were prepared to change for OPDYKE, as soon as convinced that he is the strongest man against FERNANDO WOOD. There can, doubtless, Opdyke men are this—for since the above vote was taken, HAVEMEYER has shown his weakness, and OPDYKE his irresistible strength, by his proceedings and processions.

Again, about one week ago a test vote was taken in the Methodist Book Concern," with the following result: The total vote was 256. Of those HAVEMEYER received 200, Mr. WOOD 1, and the rest for OPDYKE. A vote was taken again in the same place a day or two ago, with the following result and surprising change from the former ballot:

Total Vote	250
For Opdyke	202
For Havemeyer	15
For Wood	6
Doubtful	26—250

Such is the evidence given of the great change which within the past week has taken place in the public mind as to the availability of Mr. Havemeyer and Mr. Opdyke against Fernando Wood. The HAVEMEYER camp is almost deserted and the ranks of the Republicans are filled to overflowing, and the cry is "still they come." Who, then, with all these facts before them, will still consent to vote for Mr. HAVEMEYER, and thus throw their votes away. It is desirable to make every vote "count" in this contest, which it surely will not do to throw away Mr. HAVEMEYER. Voters reflect before you go to the polls and vote understandingly—this is all that we ask.

What do the Figures Say?—They Won't Lie—They Secure the Election of Mr. Opdyke Beyond a Doubt.

Turning from the various evidences which are constantly developing in Mr. OPDYKE's favor, let us examine the figures of the last election and from them form some conclusion as to the probable result on Tuesday next. One year ago, the parties were divided precisely as at present. Mozart Hall, Tammany Hall, and the Republican Party, each had their candidates, and the result was as follows:

Party.	Nominee.	Votes.
Tammany Hall	G. H. Purser	19,388
Mozart Hall	S. F. Russell	11,993
Total Democratic vote		30,376
Republican and American R. T. Hawes		32,469
Total vote polled		62,845

From the above figures what can we expect in the election to-day, while parties are divided, as we have said, precisely as they were last year. In the first place, it will be said, that the Democratic vote was not polled last year by 10,000. Very well; to be generous, we will add on 10,000 votes to the Democratic aggregate of last year, and the probable result will be as follows:

Party.	Nominee.	Votes.
Mozart Hall	Fernando Wood, (at least)	27,000
Tammany Hall	W. F. Havemeyer, (at most)	16,000
Total Dem. vote, (larger than ever yet poll'd)		43,000
Republican, Gen. Opdyke, (straight vote 1857)		24,000
American, Gen. Opdyke, (straight vote, 1857, 12,000)		6,000
Know-Nothing Party, Gen. Opdyke, vote three weeks ago, 3,000)		1,500
German and Truckmen, Gen. Opdyke, (said to be 4,000 strong)		1,000
Disaffected Whigs, and those as much opposed to Tammany Hall as to Fernando Wood, and who will vote for Opdyke		1,000
Total for Opdyke (same vote as polled by Mr. Hawes, 1857)		32,500

Now, who from an examination of the above figures will assert that Mr. OPDYKE is not certain of his election. We have given the Democrats their full vote, in fact more than they have ever yet polled, and 13,000 more than they received only one year ago, and to Mr. OPDYKE no more than the Republicans vote last year. Mr. OPDYKE is a more popular man than ever Mr. HAWES was, and will not only poll all the vote that he did, but will, doubtless, much increase it. With respect to the division which we have made of the Democratic vote between WOOD and HAVEMEYER, it must, we think, be conceded that our calculation is fair. The Irish portion of the Tammany vote will go en masse for Mr. WOOD, which certainly will place his number between 25,000 and 27,000 votes. All that remains for Mr. HAVEMEYER to obtain is the balance of the Democratic vote, which, as we have shown from a calculation, is not favorable to it, cannot amount to more than 16,000 or 17,000. Such is the story that the figures tell.

If the friends of Mr. HAVEMEYER dispute our calculation, let them produce their figures. We challenge them to the calculation. At this time, when so many are in doubt as to who was the strongest man against FERNANDO WOOD, why have not the friends of Mr. HAVEMEYER come out with the figures upon which they base their expectations of success? Figures are always the best data to work with, where they are correctly stated and where numbers give the victory. Why have not the friends of Mr. HAVEMEYER shown their statistics upon which they base their assertions of successful victory? Intelligent men want something more than the empty handbill of JOHN VAN BUREN and HIRAM KETCHUM to guide them in this contest. We have given the figures. Offhand, they are before you. Will you study them before you vote? Reflection is all that is required to secure your vote for GEORGE OPDYKE, the Republican nominee.

Mr. Opdyke the American Nominee—A Havemeyer Slander Nailed—Falsehoods Will Recoil Upon their Authors.

The American Convention at a regular meeting, by a vote of 38 out of 52 delegates, selected Mr. GEORGE OPDYKE as their nominee for Mayor. This was almost a unanimous nomination. Ten delegates bolted from the Convention, and it is said they nominated Mr. Havemeyer. Suppose they did!—the bulk of them belonged to the Fifteenth Ward, and on Saturday they bolted back again to the American Party, and leave Mr. HAVEMEYER overboard and indorsed Mr. OPDYKE. The Republican nominee is therefore the choice of the Americans by the unanimous vote of the American delegates. Still, with all these facts before them, the friends of Mr. HAVEMEYER insist upon it that he is the American nominee. Very well:

[illegible]

[illegible]

Yours truly, WM. GRAHAM, GEO. W. WILLIAMS.

CITIZENS
WHO REQUIRE
Railroad Facilities.

All persons who are in favor of a Broadway Railroad, with branches through the cross streets to interest, will vote for

as he is the only man nominated that can carry it to a successful issue. Mr. HAVEMEYER, who is his strongest opponent, is well known to be opposed to the project—and as such a road would be highly beneficial to persons living in the upper part of the City, and on the line of the road, every man who desires its completion, should cast their votes for FERNANDO WOOD.

AN UP-TOWN INTEREST.

CAUTION—DEMOCRATS BEWARE OF SPURIOUS TICKETS!
LOOK OUT FOR BOGUS IMITATIONS!

Of the genuine Ticket. Every species of FRAUD will be attempted by our enemies. Exact imitations of the regular ticket are already in circulation with the names of "Fernando Wood" or "George Opdyke" in place of

WM. F. HAVEMEYER.

Other bogus imitations will be circulated, and persons will attempt to smuggle them in the ticket boxes, with the names of wrongly spelled and transposed.

HAVEMEYER, TILDEN and McELROY

EXAMINE YOUR TICKETS CAREFULLY!

See that the proper designations are over the names—as follows:

For Mayor
WILLIAM F. HAVEMEYER.
For Counsel to the Corporation
SAMUEL J. TILDEN.
For Governor of the Almshouse
PATRICK McELROY.

BE VIGILANT! OUR CANDIDATES ARE CERTAINLY ELECTED! DO NOT ALLOW FRAUD TO DECREASE THEIR MAJORITIES!?

By order of the Democratic Committee of New-York.

CAUTION!
TO INSPECTORS, CANVASSERS, AND VOTERS!

I have reason to believe that efforts will be made to change the Ballots delivered to the Inspectors, under the pretence that a double Ballot has been presented, by returning to the elector his own Ballot, and placing in the box a FALSE BALLOT produced by the Inspector himself.

Every elector is therefore cautioned, in case his Ballot is returned by the Inspector, to present a single Ballot of his own, instead of allowing the Inspector to vote for him, and to see that his Ballot is deposited in the box before he leaves the Poll.

Great Fire at Marianna, Fla.

MARIANNA, Fla., Nov. 4, 1859.

MESSRS. S. C. HERRING & CO.:

GENTS: On the 28th of October our town was visited by a very destructive fire, and the largest one which has ever taken place here, destroying a whole block of the finest stores in the place. I had a Herring's Patent Safe in use, which was subjected to a most intense heat, and fell into a cellar below. After removing from the ruins and opening it, the contents were found to be wholly uninjured.

I would here remark that they truly merit the title of the Champion Fire-Proof Safes. You will please ship me another immediately, as I do not consider my books, papers and money secure without one.

Respectfully yours, D. B. LESLIE.

FIRE AT RICHMOND, VA.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 2, 1859.

Messrs. KNOWLES & WALFORD, Agents: We take pleasure in adding to your long list of certificates our testimonials in favor of HERRING'S PATENT FIRE-PROOF SAFES.

In the fire which consumed our Steam-Sawing and Carpenter-shops, on the night of the 29th October last, we had one of HERRING'S SAFES, and though exposed to intense heat, (it was entirely red-hot on the outside,) from the burning floors and timbers which fell on it, on opening the next day, we found no appearance to indicate that its contents had been near fire. We shall order another from you in a few days, and use the old one at our sawing-mill, near Mayo's Bridge, where you may refer customers who have any doubts about the FIRE-PROOF qualities of HERRING'S SAFES.

S. C. HERRING & CO., No. 251 Broadway, New-York:

GENTS: The small Safe, which I purchased of you some time since, was in my large two-story wooden building which was burned at the great fire here, the 16th inst. The Safe was red-hot, and on opening it the next morning I found its contents, which consisted of silver, two hundred dollars in Bank bills, with other papers, all safe and sound.

MESSRS. S. C. HERRING & CO.:

GENTS: The HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFE I bought of you about one month ago, was in the fire on the night of the 16th inst., in a large two-story wooden building, and on opening it I found the books and papers all right. I have since bought another of your agents, W. Herring & Son.

POLITICAL.

TWENTIETH WARD.
ANDREW H. McGLYNN,
FOR SCHOOL COMMISSIONER.

The commendable values of this Ward, without regard to party, have been presented with a few Nuts, which may help to decide their choice with regard to the two important offices of School Commissioner. Without invidious comparison to any two other of the other candidates, it is here proposed only to give them some information in regard to Mr. Andrew H. McGlynn, whose name has been placed before the people as the proper person for that important trust.

McGlynn is a native of this City, of a widely known and highly respected family, remarkable for worth and integrity of character, and for the last thirty-three years resident in this City. He is a gentleman of finished education, and well acquainted with the system, experience, systems of this country and Europe, having itself received his early training in one of the most approved institutions of learning on the Continent.

He has consented upon to allow his name to come before the people by a number of gentlemen of the Ward, who, like myself, who met for the purpose of selecting a candidate for school officers; and their choice was cordially confirmed by the Mount Hall Ward Association.

It is hoped that those in this Ward who value capability and trustworthiness more than mere party ties, will give their support to Mr. McGlynn, and thus insure the selection of the right man for the right place.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BURNETT'S COCOAINE.

A compound of Cocoa-nut Oil, &c., for dressing the Hair. For efficacy and agreeableness, it is without an equal.

It prevents the hair from falling off.
It promotes its healthy and vigorous growth.
It is not greasy or sticky.
It leaves no disagreeable odor.
It softens the hair when hard and dry.
It soothes the irritated scalp skin.
It affords the gloss of health.
A remedy long sought for and found.
It costs fifty cents for a half pint bottle.

TESTIMONIAL.

BOSTON, July 19, 1857.

Messrs. J. Burnett & Co.: I cannot refuse to state the efficacy effect in my case of your aggravated case, of your excellent Hair-Oil—(Cocoaine).

For many months my hair has been falling off, until I was fearful of losing it entirely. The skin upon my head became gradually more and more inflamed, so that I could not touch it without pain. This irritated condition I attributed to the use of various advertised hair washes, which I have since been told contain camphene spirit.

By the advice of my physician, to whom you had shown your process of purifying the Oil, I commenced its use the last week in June. The first application allayed the heating and irritation; in three or four days the inflammation and tenderness disappeared—the hair ceased to fall, and I have now a thick growth of new hair. I shall be happy to show thereby affected, will be induced to try the same remedy. Yours very truly,
SUSAN B. POPE,
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.

A lady who has spent months in the hair too neither how soon and fully restored it by the use of this Cocoaine. It is now called for all who have used it to be the best and cheapest Hair Dressing in the World.

Prepared by JOSEPH BURNETT & CO., Boston, and for sale by dealers generally at 50 cents a bottle.

LOAN FOR $2,500,000—TO PROVIDE FOR THE PAYMENT OF THE FLOATING DEBT OF THE STATE.—The Commissioners of the Canal Fund, by virtue of the act entitled "An act to submit to the people a law authorizing a loan of Two Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars to provide for the payment of the floating debt of this State," hereby give notice that sealed proposals will be received at the Canal Department until the 20th day of December next, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, for a loan of Two Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars, for which transferable certificates of Stock will be issued in the name of the people of the State of New-York, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable quarterly on the first days January, April, July and October, in each year, and the principal reimbursable as follows: Eight hundred thousand dollars on the first day of July, 1862; eight hundred thousand dollars on the first day of July, 1872, and nine hundred thousand dollars on the first day of December, 1877. It is to be understood that the Commissioners have the right to reject a less sum, if the offers are not such as in their opinion are advantageous to the interests of the State. The proposals may be for the whole or any part of either of the installments of the said loan reimbursable as above specified, not less than $5,000. Proposals will also be received at the same time and place, for the same loan, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable quarterly, and the principal and interest reimbursable at the times above named, and the Commissioners of the Canal Fund will accept the whole or such portions of such proposals for each installment of said loan at five or six per cent. interest, as they shall deem most advantageous to the interests of the State. All proposals to be sealed up and indorsed "Loan for the payment of the floating debt of the State," and inclosed in an envelope directed to the Auditor of the Canal Department at Albany.
The money will be required to be paid, five per cent. on the acceptance of the proposal, and the balance on or before the 20th of December next.
Payments to be made by depositing the same to the credit of the Comptroller of State on account of the Canal Fund," in the Bank of the Manhattan Company, New-York, or the New-York State Bank in the City of Albany. Interest on the loan will commence on the first day of January next, and the holders of the stock residing in the first and second Judicial Districts, and those residing out of the State will receive the interest on the Stock held by them, quarterly, at the Bank of the Manhattan Company, in the City of New-York; all other Stockholders at the New-York State Bank in the City of Albany. Dated Canal Department, Nov. 26, 1859.
ROBERT CAMPBELL, Canal Commr.
S. E. CHURCH, Comptroller.
I. V. VANDERPOEL, Treasurer.
LYMAN TREMAIN, Attorney-General.

CANAL DEPARTMENT, ALBANY, NOV. 28, 1859.
The Commissioners of the Canal Fund have adopted a resolution that the payments on the floating debt shall be made on and after the 20th day of December next; notice is therefore hereby given that all Canal Commissioners' drafts payable out of the proceeds of said loan and dated before the first day of January, 1860, on which payment will be claimed, will, on being presented at the Department, be paid in accordance with the said resolution.
N. S. BENTON, Auditor.

CITY OF NEW-YORK—DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE.—COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, Nov. 8, 1859.—Proposals for $650,000 Water Stock of the City of New-York, to satisfy the act entitled "An act to submit to the people a law authorizing a loan of Two Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars to provide for the payment of the floating debt of the State," hereby give notice that sealed proposals will be received at the Comptroller's Office until Tuesday, Dec. 13, 1859, at 2 o'clock P. M., when the same will be publicly opened, for the whole or any part of the amount of six hundred and fifty thousand dollars of "The Water Stock of the City of New-York, for the year 1854," authorized by Chapter 342 of the laws of 1854, and by an ordinance of the Common Council, approved by the Mayor, Nov. 1, 1859, for purchasing lands, constructing a new Reservoir, and extending the Croton Water Works.
The said stock will consist of six thousand five hundred shares of one hundred dollars each, and bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable quarter-yearly from the Sinking Fund for Payment of Interest on the City Debt, and the Principal redeemable on the 1st day of October, 1875, from the Sinking Fund for the Redemption of the City Debt.
The proposals will state the amount of stock desired, and the price per share, and the persons whose proposals are accepted will be required to deposit with the Chamberlain of the City, within ten days after the opening of the bids, the sum awarded to them respectively, including the premium on the same.
On presenting the receipts of the Chamberlain to the Comptroller, bidders will be entitled to receive certificates for equal amounts of the par value of the stock, bearing interest from the dates of payments.
Each proposition should be sealed and indorsed "Proposals for Water Stock," and the proposals thus sealed and indorsed put in a second envelope addressed to the Comptroller.
The right is reserved on the part of the Comptroller to reject any or all of the bids, if considered necessary to protect or promote the interests of the City.
ROBT. T. HAWS, Comptroller.

SCENES OF THE FIRST ACT.
THE PLAN

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

FANCY FAIR AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The means of Mercy practice over the Institution in Crosby-street, in which many friendless girls are nursed, supported, and from which they are sent to respectable situations. A fair in aid of their benevolent charity was commenced last night at the Academy of Music under circumstances somewhat unfavorable, for the weather was forbidding, and many were deterred by the impending storm; but enough appeared to prove the presence of money to where there is a good object to be attained, the weather to the contrary notwithstanding. And yet the attendance was large to judge by appearances. The building was tastefully fitted up for the purposes within which lined the walls, and every Church in the City was represented. The tables of the Sisters and of St. Mary's Church, under the supervision of Mrs. [illegible], and the other under that of Mrs. [illegible], were especially interesting and attractive. The latter exhibited a capital collection of [illegible]. They were bound up in a handsome volume. Another curiosity was an [illegible] volume, of the Fourteenth [illegible] of the Queen of May, which is to be [illegible] for when $100 shall have been subscribed. The [illegible], however, to particularize any other churches, for all appear to have done the thing [illegible] their reputations would warrant. The fair is under the management of Messrs. Gaskin and Jones, and will be continued for a fortnight. The [illegible]

[illegible] Church in Fourth-avenue, on the occasion of bidding farewell to Rev. Messrs. Wood and [illegible] of the M. E. Church, South, who have been set apart for the missionary work in China. Rev. Dr. [illegible], Corresponding Secretary of the Southern Methodist Missionary Society, having come to New-York to take leave of these brethren, was invited to hold a meeting in this church. Rev. Dr. NATHAN BANGS presided. Bishop JAMES opened the meeting with prayer, after which the infant child of Rev. Mr. ALLEN was baptised by Dr. BANGS. Rev. Dr. DURBIN, Corresponding Secretary of the Methodist Missionary Society, made a brief address, in which he expressed the opinion that the missionary work should be the common platform of union for Protestant Christians throughout the earth. Dr. McCLINTOCK followed, and Rev. Messrs. ALLEN and WOOD made addresses, detailing their Christian experience, and the circumstances which led them to devote themselves to the missionary work. The meeting was closed with a benediction by Dr. BANGS. The missionaries and their wives sail in a few days for China.

RECKLESS SHOOTING BY A BOATMAN.—On Saturday morning a number of little girls were on the pier at the foot of Delancey-street, engaged in picking up refuse coal. PATRICK BERRY, a hand employed on board one of the coal-barges, ordered them to leave, at the same time firing a pistol at them. The charge took effect in the right side of EVA STERN, a child 11 years of age, inflicting a wound so serious that her life is despaired of. BERRY was soon afterwards arrested by Officer Brown, of the Thirteenth Precinct, and in the afternoon an ante mortem inquest was made by Coroner SCHIRMER. The prisoner, in reply to the questions of the Coroner, said that "About 9 o'clock, or a little after, I saw the children on the dock, and fired the pistol to scare them away; I did not intend to do any injury." He is in the Tombs, awaiting the result of the child's injuries.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO WASHINGTON IRVING.—The New-York Typographical Society, at a meeting which was held on Saturday evening, resolved to wear the usual badge of mourning on the left arm, and caused the rooms of the Printers' Library to be draped in mourning as a tribute of respect to WASHINGTON IRVING. Mr. IRVING manifested his interest in this Society, of which he was a member, by contributing copies of his works to its library, and by otherwise assisting in its maintenance and promoting its prosperity.

BLANKETS FOR THE NEWSBOYS.—The lodging-house of these little fellows is thronged nightly—the cold weather rendering quarters at freze undesirable. The Superintendent, compelled by the sudden pressure, to appeal for aid to the charitable, begs us to say that any bed-clothing that may be sent to the rooms, No. 128 Fulton-street, or that may be called for at the dwellings of friendly donors, will be received with gratitude. The boys are suffering for want of it.

A LAUDABLE OBJECT.—The ladies of the Middle Dutch Church, situated in Lafayette-place, hold a fair to-day and to-morrow, the proceeds of which they propose to devote to the support of a missionary in the West. Those who desire to aid in this laudable object will find an opportunity by repairing to the rooms selected, which are immediately opposite the New-York Hotel.

FOR CALIFORNIA.—The steamship Baltic, Capt. A. G. GRAY, of the North Atlantic line, left yesterday from the pier foot of Canal-street, at 2 o'clock P. M., for Aspinwall. She had about 600 California passengers. The Northern Light, of the Vanderbilt line, left for the same destination at the same hour, from the foot of Warren-street. She had about 200 passengers.

BURNED TO DEATH.—EMMA C. JONES, a child four years of age, was burned to death on Saturday morning, at the residence of her parents, No. 92 East Thirty-second-street. Her clothes caught fire, during the temporary absence of her attendant, by coming in contact with the stove. An inquest was held by Coroner SCHIRMER.

A HERO ON CHANGE.—Capt. CRICHTON, formerly of the Three Bells, now of the John Bell, visited the Corn Exchange yesterday, and was warmly welcomed by some of the principal members of the Association. He was obviously an object of personal interest to all.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—The Board of Supervisors met at 2 P. M., yesterday, and was in session for five minutes. A number of papers of no public interest were presented and referred, and the Board adjourned to Tuesday, the 13th inst., at 2 P. M.

FLUSHING RAILROAD—CHANGE.—The time of running the Sunday trains has been changed as follows: Leaving Hunter's Point for Flushing and way stations at 9:30 and 11 A. M., and 4 and 5 P. M.; leaving Flushing at 8:20 and 10 A. M., and 3 and 4:30 P. M.

FOR EUROPE.—The British screw-steamship Vigo, Capt. KENNEDY, left this port on Saturday for Liverpool, with 22 cabin and 183 steerage passengers. She carried out $230,000 in specie.

WEEKLY REPORT OF THE NEW-YORK HOSPITAL.—Remaining on Nov. 25, 260; admitted to Dec. 2, 50; discharged, cured or relieved, 43; died, 7; remaining on date, 260. Males, 217; Females, 43.

Fires.

IN JONES' WOOD.

The First District alarm at about 11½ o'clock A. M. on Saturday was caused by the discovery of a fire in a barn attached to the Jones' Wood Hotel, and occupied by VALENTINE MAJOR, near the East River. Owing to the distance from the locality of any fire apparatus, the barn, with its contents, which consisted of hay, wagons, harness, &c., was entirely consumed. A broad mare, two colts and five donkeys belonging to Mr. MAJOR were saved. The barn is owned by Gen. JONES, and there is no insurance either on Mr. MAJOR's property or on the barn. The total loss amounts to about $1,200. Officer SAYRES, of the Nineteenth Precinct, arrested a man giving the name of BARTHOLOMEW STANTON, who stated that he resided at No. 314 West Twenty-ninth-street, on a charge of having set the barn on fire. The accused was locked up to await an examination by Fire-Marshal BAKER.

IN EAST FIFTY-SECOND STREET.

On Sunday morning, about 2½ o'clock, a fire occurred in the carpenter-shop owned by ANSON CHASE, and situated in East Fifty-second-street, between Lexington and Fourth-avenue. Hose Co. No. 34 extinguished the flames. The damage amounts to about $100, there being no insurance. The Police of the Nineteenth Precinct state that the fire was, no doubt, the work of an incendiary.

IN WEST TWENTY-FIFTH-STREET.

On Saturday evening, about 6½ o'clock, a number of boys made a bonfire with straw, in West 25th-street, between 10th and 11th avenues, and accidentally set fire to a shed belonging to Mr. RILEY. The flames were put out by some citizens, assisted by the Police of the Sixteenth Precinct.

IN THOMPSON STREET.

The burning of a small frame building in Thompson-street, near Broome-street, on Saturday morning, about 7½ o'clock, caused an alarm in the Third District. Loss about $50, and no insurance.

Coroners' Inquests.

FOUND DROWNED.

The body of an unknown man, respectably dressed, was found yesterday morning in the River at the foot of Catharine street. An inquest was held by Coroner JACKMAN, and the jury rendered a verdict of death by drowning. Deceased was apparently 25 years of age.

FATAL CASUALTY TO A STEVEDORE.

On the 29th ult., while PETER JOHNSON, a Swede, 45 years of age, was assisting to unload the ship Bridgewater, at pier No. 24 East River, a bar of iron slipped from the slings and struck him on the head, fracturing his skull. He was removed to the New-York Hospital, where he died yesterday. An inquest was held by Coroner JACKMAN.

Police Reports.

VICTIMS OF THEIR OWN FOLLY.

Francis H. Cornish, on Saturday evening, accompanied Martha Irvin and Delia Jackson to a disreputable house in Leonard-street, near Church, where he was robbed of $111 in gold coin. The women were subsequently arrested on suspicion of having committed the theft, and $41 of the money was recovered. Both prisoners were committed for trial. Mr. David Still, of Bensalem County, Vermont, on the same evening accepted the invitation of Bridget McGuire to accompany her to a house of questionable character in the lower part of Greenwich-street. The couple were joined there by Patrick Fitzgerald who, in [illegible] Welch and [illegible] Mr. J. Davidson, No. 289 Broadway, on [illegible] and white wrapper, pretending to examine a purchase a garment, engaged the attention of the clerk while his companion secreted beneath his coat several pieces of vestings, valued at $125. An attempt was made to detain the thieves, but they both ran off. Mr. Davidson pursued them, and, assisted by officers Dwyer and Wilkie, of the Fifth Ward, finally captured the fugitives. The goods, which they had dropped in their flight, were recovered, and the prisoners were locked up in the Tombs.

ESCAPED BURGLAR RECAPTURED.

On Saturday Capt. Dowling and Officer Jourdan, of the Sixth Ward, arrested James Brennan alias Curry, a burglar who is charged with having escaped from the County Jail, four years since, where he was confined, together with a man named Turner. Both of the burglars escaped at the same time, but Turner was recaptured about a year since, and is now serving out a sentence of fifteen years at Sing Sing. Brennan is a dashing fellow of good presence, and at the time of his yearrest was handsomely dressed. He was taken to Brooklyn yesterday.

AN HONEST BARKEEPER.

On Sunday night officer Miller, of the Twenty-[illegible] Precinct, arrested a man in the act of carrying away a quantity of ladies' garments from the store [illegible] Strand, of No. 175 West Thirty-second-[illegible] had been opened with a skeleton-key. [illegible] the name of Julius B. Cookman, who [illegible] an honest bartender. Despite [illegible] of innocence, he was yesterday [illegible] KELLY, who fully committed him [illegible] for examination.

TWO VOTES LESS FOR FERNANDO WOOD.

Detectives Farley and Eustace arrested John Resigne and William Palmer yesterday afternoon, for attempting to defraud William Abrams, by getting him to change a $100 bill on the Ohio Life and Trust Co. They are alleged to be old offenders, and were locked up for examination. Incidentally the prisoners stated to the policemen that they regretted being locked up on election-day, as they wanted to vote for Fernando Wood.

STABBING AFFRAY ON SHIPBOARD.

On Saturday night, John McCONN, a seaman on the ship Empire, is alleged to have stabbed John Lewis in five different places. Lewis was removed to the White-street House of Detention and placed under medical treatment. His assailant was arrested by the Harbor Police and locked up for examination.

DANGERS OF POLITICAL DISCUSSION.

John Lyng, while discussing politics, on Saturday, with Andrew Hines, alias Figaro, at Delmonico's, in Broadway, lost his temper, and threatened to shoot his opponent, at the same moment pronouncing a revolver. Friends, however, interposed, and the disputants were separated without having injured each other.

BOY SHOPLIFTERS.

Two lads, named Thomas Goodwin and Terrence Cavenagh, were arrested yesterday, charged with having stolen a lot of dry goods from the store of Ellen Anderson, No. 268 Hudson-street. A portion of the property was recovered from parties to whom it had been sold. The boys were committed by Justice KELLY for trial.

Officers Vanderzee and Suraine, of the Harbor Police, arrested, yesterday, on board of schooner Queen of the South, from Messina, H. A. Russell, colored steward, on a charge of shooting, on the 10th ult., at sea, Andrew Tucker, colored seamen, who shortly afterwards died from the wounds received.

THE TRANSMISSION OF KNOWLEDGE.

Lecture by Rev. Dr. Bethune.

The hall of the Mechanics' Library was filled, last evening, to listen to a lecture from Rev. Dr. BETHUNE. On being introduced to the audience, he said that he had refused all invitations to lecture, and they had not been a few, but at the urgent solicitation of a friend, he had consented to deliver a kind of conversational lecture before the Mechanics' Association. His subject he had styled "The Transmission of Knowledge," though it did not cover the whole ground which he intended to traverse. He then proceeded to show how we could have received historical accounts by direct transmission from man to man. Allowing 80 years to be the average age of man, from the Creation, 5,800 years ago, it would have taken but eighty-four men to connect us with that event. But we are not led to depend on tradition alone, for we have the inspired records of the Bible. Dr. BETHUNE then briefly explained the origin of idolatry, which first existed in the Persian or Chaldee nation. The doctrine of this idolatry was that of emanation, first of the word, next of the gods, then of matter; and lastly of heroes. The different ideas in the heathen minds caused a division among them. One part went to India, proof of which we find in the Hindoo mythology. Another part traveled southward to the Nile, under the leadership of Ham. The philosophy of this colony was also that of Emanation, but became materially changed in process of time. Thus they worshiped the crocodile as the god of the river Nile, and, as Egypt was a very fertile country, they worshiped Agriculture under the sign of an ox, or some animal similar to an ox. Still later they deified Production, under forms the most revolting. From Egypt the light of civilization—if such it might be termed—extended to Greece, under CADMUS. Greece in turn established colonies in Egypt, and it was in Alexandria that the Scriptures were translated into Greek, known among theologians as the Scriptuagint. Dr. BETHUNE said he would as soon believe that the Pilgrim Fathers did not land at Plymouth as that Athens was not founded by CADMUS. And, by the way, he did not see why they were all called Fathers, for they did not beget the whole American nation. (Laughter.) They were highly-respectable men, especially as they spent several years in Holland. (Laughter.)

In Alexandria several schools arose. PYTHAGORAS studied there, whence he went to Crotona and founded a school, the doctrines of which were adopted by PLATO, and it was the Platonic philosophy that first went to Rome. Throughout the ancient writings there is no philosophy so seductive as the Platonic. It was the origin of the modern Rationalism. About the second century of the Christian era the Alexandrian school was founded, and from its corruptions nearly all the heresies of the Christian Church have arisen. ORIGEN and AUGUSTINE were both tainted with it, and indeed many of the Christian Fathers found it hard to put off the old man and put on the new man in Christ Jesus. The Alexandrian philosophy stalks in our theological hall, and is often recognized in the discourses of our preachers. As the seat of empire was changed to Byzantium, the modern Constantinople, philosophy went with it. This the lecturer deemed a complete refutation of the hypothesis of the French schools, that man was originally a savage. God did not make man one remove from a monkey. He made him in His own image. When Adam came forth from the hand of God, he came, if the expression might be allowed, a highly civilized man. Barbarism is a late state of man; civilization is the original. It was while the shepherds of Judea were watching their flocks by night and looking up into the heavens, that astronomy began. They were not savages who marked out the zodiac and calculated eclipses. Yet that miserable wretch, ROUSSEAU, tells us that man was originally a savage. ROUSSEAU was far more of a savage than that early man. [Applause.] Dr. BETHUNE did not believe in indigenous civilization. On the contrary, civilization is, like fruit, propagated by grafts. We have a civilization that was in the garden of Eden, or at least was taught at its gates by our first parents.

The object of the lecture, as stated in conclusion, was to enforce the unity of the race. As the light of the glorious sun of righteousness fills the world, the nations will cease to be divided against each other, and man, under the name of humanity, will be brought back to that God who talked with him under the trees of the Garden.

Owing to the lateness of the hour, the lecturer shortened his remarks, though he had not said all that he intended. The audience heartily applauded him at its close.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

BROOKLYN COMMON COUNCIL.

Weekly Meeting of the Board of Aldermen, chairman VAN BRUNT called up a resolution laid on the table April 26th, during the amount of Commissioners for grading and paving Fourth-avenue from Sixteenth to Twenty-first-street, and from Twenty-third-street to the New-Utrecht line, at $106 627 61. The resolution was adopted. A resolution laid on the table at the same time, referring to the same avenue, directing "the Law Committee to take the necessary steps to enforce the payment of the difference between the bid of T. V. Talmage and the next lowest bid, from the said Talmage or his sureties, if not the amount so collected to be apportioned to the property owners on said Fourth-avenue, pro rata, according to the assessment for said improvement," was also called up and adopted. A resolution requesting the City Railroad Company to increase their facilities for enabling the people of the Eastern District to reach the City Hall, was, on motion of Alderman SUSSEX, taken up, and against the remonstrance of every Alderman from the Eastern District, referred to the Railroad Committee. A motion to reconsider a resolution adopted at the last meeting, giving the joint occupancy of Furman-street for railroad purposes to the Central Railroad Company and to the City Company, provided the latter would pay their proportion of costs, was lost by a decided vote. The long-pending difficulty as to providing means to pay contractors for cleaning the Eleventh Ward, was settled by directing the Comptroller to issue, under the direction of the Finance Committee, a bond for the amount claimed, to be paid out of money to be raised for Eleventh Ward purposes in 1860. An issue of the Corporation bonds to pay a judgment against the city for $9,616 46, incurred by the opening of President-street, was directed by resolution. In connection with the same subject the Corporation Counsellor was directed to take the necessary steps to secure to the city from WELLS & Co., water contractors, the amount named in the previous resolution, in pursuance of the contract between the city and said WELLS & Co.

MORTALITY.—There were 118 deaths in this City during the week ending Saturday last, classified as follows: Men, 20; women, 22; boys, 20; girls 46. Adults, 42; children, 76. Males, 56; females, 62. The principal diseases were consumption, 18; infantile convulsions, 11; scarlet fever, 14; and croup 8. Ninety-one of the individuals were born in the United States.

SYSTEMATIC ROGUE.—A clerk, in the employ of J. Q. ADAMS & Co., on Atlantic-street, was sent to prison by Justice CROWELL, on Saturday. It was charged by his employers that he had a duplicate key to one door of the store, and that, at night, he would enter the premises and steal small sums from the money-drawer, which he regularly deposited in one of the Savings Banks.

HARBOR PIRATES AT WORK.—On Wednesday last, as Mr. JOHN PERRIN, of Greenport, was crossing in a row-boat to Shelter Island, he was ordered to stop by two men in another boat. Upon refusing to comply with the demand they fired a pistol at him, the ball from which grazed his hat. Their attempts to overtake him were unsuccessful.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A seaman at work on the ship Robert Sanders, lying near the South Ferry, on Saturday morning, stepped and fell so heavily that he received severe if not fatal injuries. He was attended by Police Surgeon BALL, and was subsequently sent to the City Hospital for treatment.

INQUESTS.—Coroner HORTON held an inquest on Sunday, in the Ninth Police Precinct, on the body of a child which had died from the want of proper medical attendance. Also on the body of a man named PATRICK M. ALCON, at No. 143 Water-street, who died suddenly Saturday night from congestion of the brain.

FIRE.—The alarm of fire at 8 o'clock Saturday evening proceeded from the store of BEARDSLE & WICKERS, No. 44 Fulton-street. The fire was discovered in time to prevent much damage.

GAS.—The Williamsburgh Gas Light Company announce their intention to reduce the price of gas on the 1st of January next, from $3 50 per 1,000 cubic feet to $3.

Amusements.

Mr. BOUCICAULT's new drama, called "The Octoroon," will be produced to-night at the Winter Garden. The work presents, in a series of acts, a picture of Southern life, involving, necessarily, the Slavery question in its concrete form of a slave-sale. The extreme East also has its representative; and that he will be a powerful one, cannot be doubted when we mention the name of Mr. JEFFERSON. Mr. STUART's management has always been remarkable for the sacrifices it has made to insure good first representations. It is not surprising, therefore, that for "The Octoroon" two regular performances have been postponed, in order that the artists of the establishment might be entirely at liberty to devote themselves exclusively to the work in hand. We anticipate a great success for Mr. BOUCICAULT's drama.

PARLOR OPERA.—Every addition to Mr. and Mrs. DRAYTON's repertoire is a matter of interest to the public, for "parlor opera" is unquestionably established in our City as one of its most pleasing institutions. A new proverb called "There's a Silver Lining to Every Cloud" was the feature of last evening's programme, and by its simple but effective transcription of the plot and music of "La Somnambula" obtained the sympathies of a delighted audience. It is not an easy matter to reduce an extensive work to the easy dimensions of a proverb, but Mr. DRAYTON in this instance has succeeded admirably. The greater part of the original music (for the principals) is retained, and Mr. and Mrs. DRAYTON rendered it with rare artistic skill. It is a pleasure to know that their efforts were well appreciated. The new proverb is, unquestionably, a valuable addition to the list of brilliant novelties contained in the programme of the establishment for parlor opera.

The upward direction of the present Bank return is larger in every item than generally looked for. The explanation is found in the very considerable sums paid into the Shoe and Leather Bank during the week for City Taxes. The increase of Loans, as well as Specie, is mainly found in the report of this Bank. The aggregate Specie Average rises above twenty millions once more. The partial addition to the Discount line was not felt on the Money Market, at least not to the extent of counteracting the demand upon the local Deposits to pay Taxes. The market opens quiet this week, both for Discounts and Loans on demand. The former are generally at 7 ⅌ cent., the exceptions below this rate being on very prime short bills. There is fair employment for Money among the Stock Brokers at 6 ⅌ cent. on miscellaneous, and 5@5½ ⅌ cent. on State and Federal security. The Exchanges for the Africa, sailing from this port for England on Wednesday, open with sales of Southern Bank bills at 109½ on London, and 109⅞ for best City drawn Bankers'. An arrival of $462,000 in Mexican dollars, &c., by the Cahawba, from New-Orleans this morning, will probably increase the supply of sight Exchange on London, as we understand the Silver will at once go forward. French bills range from f.5.16¼ to f.5.13¾, most of the business about f.5.14¾.

The Stock Market opened dull after the heavy closing of Saturday, but it was soon noticed that with the single exception of Galena and Chicago, which is further depressed to 69¾ ⅌ cent., there was not much disposition to sell on the reduced quotations made at the close of last week. The list of sales at the early Board is, therefore, below the average amount of late, and in some leading descriptions the business very inconsiderable. Between the Boards, lower sales of Galena were made on the Street, while New-York Central and Pacific Mail were firmer. The whole rise of the day on the latter is equal to 4 ⅌ cent., but upon what influence, more than was felt on Saturday, we are not advised, though conjecture still points to the probability of an early adjustment of the competition between the rival steamship lines upon some paying basis for both parties; possibly by leaving the Atlantic side exclusively, to the Vanderbilt Company; the Pacific side to the Pacific Mail Company, exclusively, and the gross receipts on through business to be divided on some agreed and fixed proportion. The last sales, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, were at 78½ ⅌ cent., against 74¼@75 on Saturday's report. Panama, on the other hand, is rather lower than on Saturday. Rock Island, the two Michigan Roads, Toledo and Illinois Central were comparatively steady, and closed with little or no variation from Saturday's latest quotations. New-York Central also closed at 80¼@¾ as on Saturday. Reading and Erie both a fraction firmer. The General Share list finally closed somewhat irregular in tone and demand, while State Stocks and Railway Bonds were quoted steady. Eries in better request, 92 ex-dividend for First Mortgage, 88 for Second, and 48 for Fourth. The Thirds held for 75 ⅌ cent., and the bid only 70 ⅌ cent.

The Delaware and Hudson Canal Company have declared a semi-annual dividend of 3½ ⅌ cent., payable Dec. 21. The transfer books will remain closed till the morning of the 19th inst.

At New-Orleans the rate of Exchange on England and New-York held firm, checks on this City commanding 99¼@99¾ ⅌ cent. Best London, 108¼@109¼ ⅌ cent. The following is the latest Bank return:

The importance of the subject induces the publication in full of the Message of the Governor of Mississippi, in favor of the resumption of the public faith on $2,000,000 of the old Bonds of the State. The Message appears to have been a special one.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
CITY OF JACKSON, Nov. 18, 1859.

To the Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN: Since the last meeting of the Legislature, I have received several petitions from the subjects of foreign Governments, and also from citizens of the United States, respectfully asking the payment of certain Planters' Bank Bonds issued by the State. I herewith transmit those petitions to you, with the recommendation that some satisfactory arrangement should be made in relation to their payment. These bonds were originally for $2,000,000, and there is now, in addition to the original amount of the bonds, a considerable amount due for interest on the same. Though a portion of this interest has been paid, viz.: On the 30th of November, 1858, there was a payment of $101,500, and on the 5th of July last $20.

An act of the Legislature was passed in 1848, authorizing the State officers to convey the Internal Improvement lands of the State to the holders of these Bonds in payment, at the price of six dollars per acre—and a small portion of them were so conveyed. But since that time the greater portion of these lands have been sold, and the proceeds of the same invested in the different railroads of the State. I would suggest that on the completion of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad, that the stock then held by the State in said road might be sold and made to contribute largely to the payment of these Bonds.

In 1852, by an act of the Legislature, the question was submitted to the people, asking whether or not they were willing to be taxed for the payment of those bonds. The answer was in the negative. I then thought, as I now think, that the bonds ought to be paid, and voted accordingly. If you, the immediate representatives of the people, should not feel authorized, in the face of this vote, to make an arrangement for the payment of these bonds, the question might be raised and submitted to the people, again asking their consent to the imposition of a tax sufficient to pay the interest for the present on the same, and to provide a fund in aid of the funds arising from the sale of Internal Improvement lands sufficient to provide for their payment in forty years, which I have no doubt would be voted by the people, when it is made to appear that the present indebtedness of the State, that is, its bonded debt, is not a burden on the value and amount of taxable property within the State, that it is not believed that one twenty-fifth of the present rate of taxation would be necessary for the purpose. But, even admitting that it might require an additional tax to meet this obligation, it seems to me a valid objection. The question for your solution is, Are those bonds due and unpaid? If the question should be answered in the affirmative, in my opinion the question of payment is no longer debatable—and proper provision should be made for
